Government Flees From Bilbao; Junta Takes Reins

Secret Capital Set Up as Rebels Kill Women and Children.

150,000 Refugees Flee to Santander

Cries of Wounded Drown Roar of Guns; Bodies Litter Fields.

By the Associated Press.

Bayonne, France, June 17.—The official Basque delegation here announced tonight that the government of the Basque Republic had left Bilbao, its besieged capital, "for another point in Basque territory."

The delegation said the location of the new capital of the autonomous regime was being kept secret for military reasons.

Previously, the Basque government, under President Jose Antonio Aguirre, had declared its determination to fight to the finish against the insurgent armies which have been hammering at Bilbao for 11 weeks.

Official dispatches from Bilbao said Basque resistance had stiffened under leadership of a new defense junta of four men, which took over control of the city when the government departed.

The Basque reports declared that five desperate attacks on Mount Archanda, called the key to Bilbao, had been thrown back with heavy insurgent losses.

Dying Cover Fields.

"The battlefields are strewn with dead and dying," said one dispatch. "The cries of the wounded, the laments of the dying can be heard over the rattle of the machine guns and the roar of the cannon."

The junta immediately posted an appeal to the city's population urging calmness. It promised to "save Bilbao" with the co-operation of the citizens.

The delegation published a telegram it said it had received from the Bilbao junta declaring the insurgent shelling of Bilbao continued into the night, with pursuit planes flying 200 feet above the streets and machine gunning everything within range.

"One hundred and fifty thousand persons have been evacuated from Bilbao to Santander by land and sea within the past 48 hours," the telegram read.

Refugee Ship Sunk.

"Some of the (refugee) ships have been stopped by rebel warships and at least one has been sunk with the loss of many lives.

"German aviation, not content to bombard the cities and villages of Vizcaya (the province containing Bilbao) and machine gun the population of Bilbao, still is trying to prevent the evacuation of the city to Santander.

"Pursuit planes, flying low after dropping their bombs, have massacred an immense caravan of women and children with machine guns.

"Tonight, in pitch darkness, there is a frightful spectacle. Over the sound of machine-gun bullets and the crash of bombs come screams of terror and pain from the dying on the roads, which are covered with the torn bodies of women and children. Their pitiful baggage is scattered by the side of the roads.

"This morning Bilbao suffered a terrible bombardment. Several shells hit hospitals, which were jammed with sick and wounded. The number of victims is very high."

The military situation at Bilbao is stationary, the junta reported.

"The morale of our soldiers does not flinch before the enemy's attacks," the telegram said. It declared the insurgents used more than 10,000 hand grenades in the attacks on Mount Archanda.

The junta admitted that "Italian troops" had captured Las Arenas, vital town at the mouth of the Nervion River, Bilbao's outlet to the sea.

Angry Annapolis Acts To Be Capital in Fact

In Fighting Mood, City Lines Up Behind $1,000,000 Office Building Bill to Take $150,000 Yearly Rental From Baltimore.

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., June 17.—This proud and historic town, capital of Maryland since 1694, is fighting today to be a capital in fact as well as in name.

As the situation stands, little Annapolis is the official capital but big Baltimore has most of the State offices. These are housed for the most part in privately owned buildings, for which the State pays Baltimore real estate interests $150,000 a year in rentals.

Annapolis wants those offices concentrated here in a State-owned building, and, if the Maryland Legislature is truly representative, so, too, does a majority of the State's citizens.

The current fight rages around a bill passed at the last session of the Legislature. This authorized a $1,000,000 bond issue to pay for a building here in which would be housed the many State offices that are now scattered in rented buildings in Baltimore.

When Gov. Harry W. Nice signed the State office building bill, Annapolis citizens congratulated themselves on a victory that had come after a half century of agitation. They visualized a handsome structure arising amid the historic buildings that have lent charm to Annapolis since early colonial days.

Today, however, Annapolis sees that victory imperiled, and as a consequence it is in a fighting mood. A Baltimore attorney, Willis R. Jones, has filed a petition with the Secretary of State, which, unless the Court of Appeals rules otherwise, will result in the bill for a $1,000,000 bond issue being submitted to a referendum in the election of 1938.

On top of that maneuver, Attorney Jones has obtained an injunction to prevent the sale of bonds for the building.

Who is behind the fight to deny Annapolis the office building? At the outset, it was announced that Attorney Jones represented the Maryland Classified Employes Association. Recently, however, Harvey B. Hall, president of the association, denied that his group had retained Mr. Jones.

Louis N. Phipps, Mayor of Annapolis, appears to have no doubt as to who is behind the fight to keep the offices in Baltimore.

"It is the selfish real estate interests of Baltimore," he says. "It is the men who are collecting most of the $150,000 a year that the State pays in rentals."

So angry are the people of Annapolis that they have threatened to boycott Baltimore goods and merchants.

Also they have started a counter-attack in the form of a petition to tie up a $9,000,000 bond issue which

Victory Near For Mangled D.C. Tax Bill

Slated to Pass House Today Minus Income, Loan Provisions.

20-Cent Rise in Realty Levy Is Voted at Stormy Session.

By James D. Secrest.

A mangled omnibus District tax bill ran the gantlet of a resentful House yesterday and is expected to be passed today and sent to the Senate.

Members, still incensed over the attempt to impose an income tax on their own salaries, struck from the bill two titles and attached amendments to impose severe taxes on local chain stores and to raise the scale of levies on inheritance.

Worn out after 6½ hours of wrangling, they cut short an anticipated debate over an income tax versus a 20-cent increase in the realty and personal property tax and adopted the latter by a vote of 88 to 10.

The two titles eliminated from the bill were (1) an authorization for the Secretary of the Treasury to make temporary loans to the District and (2) authority for the Commissioners to experiment with parking meters.

These two divisions can be restored only by the Senate but members of the Kennedy sub-committee today will try to defeat the two major amendments by demanding separate roll call votes before the final passage of the measure.

Debate Is Ended.

All debate on the bill was ended yesterday so that there will be no more argument before the votes are taken.

Elimination of the first title of the bill, relating to advances from the Treasury, will place the District in an acute fiscal situation early in the fiscal year beginning July 1 unless it is restored in the Senate or tacked onto the District supply bill, now in conference.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan stated last night that the District will end this fiscal year with a deficit of approximately $1,500,000 and will have less money in the Treasury at the beginning of the new year than at any time during the last decade.

The $5,000,000 Federal lump sum payment will be the only revenue that the District will get before the semiannual tax collection in September.

Unless the authority for temporary loans is obtained, the District may be unable to meet its bills, and employes may possibly go payless, it was said.

This problem is expected to be taken up early next week when conferees on the District supply bill are expected to meet. Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee, yesterday returned to Washington and immediately asked that the Senate amendments, adding more than $1,000,000 to the House bill, be rejected and that the bill go to conference.

Under the combined leadership of Chairman Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, and Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, the omnibus tax bill reached the final stage of House consideration with all of the major tax provisions retained.

The only elimination, that of the income levy, was made upon motion of the committee although it had been dictated by the House Rules Committee as a condition to granting a special rule.

Gas Tax Rise Killed.

The sub-committee withstood amendments to raise the gas tax to 4 cents, substitute a 4 per cent land tax for the entire bill, and exemptions from the realty tax of homes valued at $5,000 or under with a steep graduated tax on properties valued at more than $10,000.

Amid the confusion that attended the last hour's debate the House adopted an amendment, offered by Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, to apply the business privilege levy on all establishments operating in Federal buildings.

This means that the District will collect the three-fifths of 1 per cent tax on the gross receipts of the House and Senate restaurants as well as those operating in Government buildings for the exclusive benefit of Federal employes.

The two major amendments were proposed by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, who led the House revolt on Monday against the

Miss Earhart Off On 1,000-Mile Hop To Bangkok, Siam

Calcutta (Friday), June 18 (AP).—Amelia Earhart took off from Dumdum Airdrome at 6:42 a. m. today (8:12 p. m. Thursday, E. S. T.) for Bangkok, Siam, on the next leg of her flight around the middle of the earth.

Miss Earhart landed at the airdrome here yesterday after a 1,350-mile flight across India from Karachi.

"The journey from Karachi was pleasant all the way except when I ran into a shower nearing Calcutta," she said. "This did not, however, impede my progress."

The flier, on a leisurely round-the-world flight, planned after the Bangkok stop, to hop to Darwin, Australia, via Singapore, then to Batavia in Dutch East Indies, and Surabaya, Java, before starting across the Pacific on the last laps homeward.

Federal Board of 3 Appointed To Speed Steel Strike Peace; Both Sides Will 'Co-operate'

Board Appointed to Mediate Steel Strikes

Associated Press Photos.

Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday announced appointment of a three-man board to mediate the steel strike. They are shown above. From left, Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor; Charles P. Taft, son of the former President and chief justice, and Lloyd K. Garrison. They will begin work at once.

Secretary Perkins appointed a three-man mediation board in an attempt to settle the steel strike of 100,000 men.

Steel company officials and union leaders were silent on whether they will agree that the mediation board arbitrate the dispute over signed labor contracts.

U. S. Board Named.

By William V. Nessly.

Following repeated pleas for intervention, and with nearly a dozen workmen killed to date, the Federal Government undertook yesterday to settle the violent and widespread steel strike, involving 100,000 workers in seven States.

With the approval of President Roosevelt, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins announced appointment of the Federal mediation board which will endeavor to work out a peaceful settlement. The members are:

Charles P. Taft, son of the former President and one of the advisers to Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee last year. His home is in Cincinnati.

Lloyd K. Garrison, former chairman of the Labor Relations Board and now dean of the Wisconsin University law school.

Edward F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of Labor and veteran negotiator and conciliator in labor disputes.

Taft, as chairman, called the other two to meet him in Cleveland tomorrow.

At Cincinnati Taft disclosed that before accepting the appointment he told Secretary Perkins his wife held stock in two of the concerns involved.

Mrs. Taft has 10 shares of stock in the Inland Steel Co. and 50 shares in the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

The Labor Secretary, Taft said, assured him this would not disqualify him.

Davey Wires Plea.

Appointment of the board followed receipt of a new intervention plea, this one from Gov. Martin L. Davey, of Ohio, who wired the President the strike had attained proportions beyond the powers of any State to handle. The President and Miss Perkins had hoped for several days Gov. Davey would be able to bring about peace in the industry, and the Labor Secretary yesterday praised the "very real" efforts he had made.

Assurances both sides would co-operate with the mediation board were given Miss Perkins late in the day. Philip Murray, head of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee directing the strike, called on her and said he and other strike officials would appear before the board and present their case.

John S. Brookes, Washington attorney for Republic Steel Corporation, then conferred with the Secretary and later told reporters:

"Our company will co-operate like we always have co-operated. The strike is costing us a lot of money and we are as interested as anyone in reaching a settlement."

"Of course we'll be glad to co-operate."

Inland, with headquarters in Chicago, employs 13,000 men in Indiana Harbor, Ind., and Chicago Heights, Ill. Its mills have been closed since the walkout.

Japan Refuses Limitation Plea; Bids Disappoint Swanson.

As the Navy Department yesterday opened bids on construction of one of this country's two new battleships, it appeared almost certain the new craft would be equipped with 16-inch guns because of Japan's refusal to agree to a 14-inch limitation on caliber.

It was revealed at the State Department that the United States, at the instance of President Roosevelt, has communicated with the four other principal sea powers, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, seeking a limitation agreement to which Japan had objected at the time of the breakup of the London Naval Conference.

News dispatches from Tokyo yesterday, carried by the Associated Press, said an "authoritative source" had revealed Japan's decision to reject the President's proposal. Without agreement by all of the five powers, it is conceded, this country would have no other course than to mount the larger guns.

Three companies submitted bids yesterday on the first new battleship, the total cost for hull and machinery alone varying from a qualified offer bid of $46,212,500 to a fixed price of $59,900,000. For guns and armor, supplied by the Government, an additional $20,000,000, approximately, must be added to determine the total cost.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson immediately displayed disappointment with the bids. He made public estimates from the Philadelphia and New York navy yards placing the construction cost at $36,560,300 and $37,265,843, respectively. The Navy had advised Congress the battleships would cost from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 each, complete, and Secretary Swanson indicated, in view of yesterday's bids, that both might be built in navy yards. One must be constructed in a Government yard, under the law.

Sensation Flops As Tax Dodgers Remain Secret

Morgenthau, Aide Outline Types of Evasion, Leave Names Till Today.

By Sidney Olson.

The Joint House-Senate Committee on Tax Evasion and Tax Avoidance heard two lengthy discourses on methods of tax-dodging yesterday and then, with considerable disappointment to those who had come for a first-day sensation, adjourned until today.

The committee members, the press, a horde of tax lawyers and several hundred spectators had gathered with keenly whetted appetites in expectation of a series of sensational disclosures of the names of wealthy and socially prominent tax-dodgers.

But Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Undersecretary Roswell Magill, the day's only witnesses, contented themselves with scholarly disquisitions on the subject, postponing the actual examination of the various cases, including the long-awaited names, until today.

Harrison Demands Names.

The five Senators and six Representatives, primed to explore the problem, sat quietly drinking tall glasses of pineapple-orangeade, but obviously fidgeting for the revelation of the names.

At last Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, vice chairman of the joint committee, bluntly asked young Magill:

"These names, now. How about them? Some of us are interested in the names of these men. When do we get them?"

"You'll get all the names," said Magill. "But we thought, unless the committee wishes otherwise, that the most orderly way would be to outline the types of tax evasion and avoidance, and then to put on the stand before you the men who have actually studied each type of case."

The committee somewhat glumly refrained from objecting to this,

By the United Press.

Paris (Friday), June 18.—Agence Radio, semi-official Paris news agency, reported from Budapest today that Bela Kun, one-time Communist dictator of Hungary, had been shot in Russia.

Recent reports said the squat, bristling fugitive from most of the countries of Europe was arrested in Moscow.

No reason for the alleged execution was given.

Bela Kun, 54, ruled Hungary with an iron hand for a short time after November, 1918, when he seized power, violently displacing the mild Count Karolyi.

He was overthrown by Admiral Nicholas de Horthy, present regent of Hungary.

Since then Bela Kun built up a reputation as the world's "No. 1 Communist germ-spreader," through his activities in most of the countries of Europe.

He shuttled between Vienna and Bucharest and Budapest, using Moscow as a base. In February, 1936, he was accused by Hungarian authorities of fomenting red intrigues. In March last year he was reported in Spain, organizing the extreme wing of the popular front.

He was said to have had a hand in extremist measures in France. No totalitarian country admitted him. Brazil was jittery when he was reported trying to land at Rio de Janeiro last July. London had a scare in February. In 1934 Denmark heard he had crept in, disguised as a woman.

Bela Kun was born near Kolozsvar, Transylvania. He was graduated from the University of Vienna Law School. He fought in the Hungarian army and was captured by the Russians in the World War.

Low Interest Farm Loan Bill Defeat Asked

By Russell Smith

The turbulent Seventy-fifth Congress yesterday was told by President Roosevelt the Jones bill continuing low emergency interest rates on some farm loans, and reducing others, "constitutes a gift from the Federal Treasury."

In requesting the defeat of the bill, the President risked another legislative set-back. The bill already has passed the House. The senatorial farm bloc is restive under criticism for failure to enact general farm legislation at this session.

Addressed to Author.

Finally, the letter asking its defeat was addressed to the bill's author, Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas, indicating the House already had passed the measure knowing of the President's disapproval.

Dictated June 7 at about the time the House was voting on the bill, the letter was not sent to Jones until the following day, Gov. William I. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration, said last night. Copies were sent to Senators Barkley, of Kentucky, and Wagner, of New York.

The letter became public yesterday during hearings on the bill by the Senate Finance Committee, at which Gov. William I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration said the interest rates proposed in the bill would be tantamount to a Federal subsidy.

The Jones bill would:

1. Extend for one year the 3½ per cent subsidy interest rate on land bank loans totaling more than $2,000,000,000. A 4 per cent rate would became effective a year hence.

2. Impose a one-year reduction from 5 to 4 per cent in the rate on outstanding land bank commissioner farm mortgage loans, totaling $832,000,000.

In his letter to Jones, the President, for the first time during the controversy over farm interest rates, said flatly that it is "not reasonable" to insist that rates of 4 per cent on first, and of 5 per cent on second, farm mortages, are "unreasonably high."

Huge Costs Stressed.

The legislation will cost the Treasury an estimated $40,000,000 annually and will hamper seriously efforts of the Administration to balance the budget, the President added.

The Senate Finance Committee heard Myers declare the bill raises the "definite possibility" that the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation will be unable to meet its obligations from its own income.

The reduction to 4 per cent in interest rates on Commissioners' loans, he pointed out, would affect

Girl, 12, Accused Of Extortion Plot

Seattle, June 17 (AP).—O. K. Bodia, chief criminal deputy sheriff, said today a 12-year-old girl and not a gang of criminals made telephone attempts yesterday to extort $5,000 from P. T. Lee, operating superintendent of the North Coast Bus Lines, on a threat to kidnap one of Lee's three children. He said the girl, a neighbor's child, will not be arrested.

Investigators disclosed that in one call yesterday a woman's voice told Mrs. Lee: "We mean business. It will cost $5,000 if you don't want one of those youngsters of yours to be another Mattson kid. If we do have to go through with it, it'll cost a lot more."

U. S. Debt Soars to 36 Billion, All-Time and Unexpected High

Will Be Approximately $1,300,000,000 Greater Than Estimated by Roosevelt at End of Fiscal Year on June 30.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Jumping forward by the huge sum of $1,352,000,000 on Tuesday, the national debt at the end of that day stood at the all-time and unanticipated high of $36,633,907,802.

Within the next few days this figure will drop approximately $300,000,000 as the Treasury retires maturing obligations in that amount, leaving the debt figures at the end of the fiscal year on June 30 at approximately $36,300,000,000, or approximately $1,300,00,000 greater than estimated by the President last January.

In making his estimate of the debt figure for June 30, Mr. Roosevelt, however, expressedly excluded from his calculation any sums borrowed in connection with the Treasury gold sterilization program. Since December the Treasury has sterilized $975,654,677 of imported gold. Taking that item into account, the debt will be approximately $325,000,000 greater than estimated in January, but the President indicated in April he was aware of this forthcoming development when he boosted his deficit estimate for the fiscal year now nearing its end by $309,000,000.

Even though business is booming, farm income higher than in any year since the depression commenced, many wage levels higher than in 1929, and industrial production above the statistical normal levels, the Federal Government in this fiscal year will have a gross deficit of close to $3,000,000,000.

D. C. Cathedral Honors 3 of Other Faiths

Dr. Douglas Freeman, 2 Others Given 'Honorary Canonries.'

Announcement of three new "honorary canonries" to persons outside the denomination was made yesterday at Washington Cathedral.

Those who were honored include Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, a Baptist, of Richmond, Va.; the Rev. William Adams Brown, a Presbyterian, of New York and Dr. John R. Mott, a Methodist, of New York.

Appointment of the three was revealed by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, who said they were so honored because of their contributions to Christianity and the work of the church.

The new appointments, he asserted, were made with the definite purpose of furthering "that Christian fellowship between the churches which is so vitally important and which the Cathedral in the Nation's Capital, with its broad Congressional Charter, had always aimed to promote."

Bishop Freeman added that the new appointees all have been long and intimately associated with the cathedral and have proved themselves most sympathetic with its ideals of work and worship, and most effective in advancing its welfare. They have been occasional preachers at the special Sunday vesper services, as well as members of

Sit-Down Seen If Ohio Steel Plants Reopen

C. I. O. Threatens to Block Back-to-Work Plan; Both Sides 'Sitting Tight.'

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 17.—Warring factions in the multi-million-dollar "battle of steel" sat tight tonight—pledging "co-operation" but otherwise noncommittal on intervention by the Federal Government with the appointment of a three-man board to arbitrate the strike deadlock.

The first meeting of the board was called for Saturday morning in Cleveland.

Both sides were silent, however, on the question of whether they will accept the Federal group as a decision-making arbitration body. Such consent is necessary before the board can make awards.

Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., issued a written statement, declaring:

"We have no comment to make on the reported appointment of a mediating committee by the Federal Government. My great interest just now is the restoration of pay rolls so that our employes may resume their lawful occupations and be enabled to support themselves and their families.

"A large number of employes are pressing us to open our gates so that they can go back to work under the same conditions as those

Private Worth W. Peltzenberger, 35, of the 1200 block of Staple street, suffered cuts and bruises when he was hurled from the truck. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, while the truck proceeded to the hom Charles Stickel, where the chimn had been struck by lightning.

Policeman Andrew W. Taylor, 30, of the 500 block of Franklin street northeast, was cut and bruised when he was struck by an automobile as he was directing traffic in the first block of Florida avenue northeast at the height of the storm.

Murray Calls Steel's Plants 'Armed Camps'

Violent Acts Occur With Impunity, He Tells Senate Group.

Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, charged yesterday that "the steel barons have created armed camps where any act of violence on the part of their agents, including wholesale murder of innocent and defenseless workers can occur with impunity and without accounting to the law."

Murray, who referred to the men heading the four independent steel companies where strikes are now in force, made this statement in his appearance yesterday before the Senate Post Office Committee.

The committee, after hearing his list of charges against the companies, which he said "have entered into an unholy alliance to flout all laws," subpenaed a print of the Paramount newsreel showing the slaughter of marching workers by Chicago police on Memorial Day at the Republic Steel Co. plant.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee, headed by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, has already subpenaed this film after having seen it privately.

To Call Police Officials.

Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, declaring that he was interested particularly "in the other side of the picture," announced at the hearing he would call State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, of Illinois, who has been conducting a personal investigation of the scene of May 30, and the police officials "who are accused of murder."

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, member of the Civil Liberties Committee, who has seen the suppressed newsreel of the riot, said yesterday:

"I am surprised the number of casualties was not far larger than the nine killed and 50 maimed. It is very much to the credit of the crowd that it showed so much control under great provocation by the police.

"The strikers offered absolutely no resistance . . .

"If this film shows the whole story of what happened, the Chicago police stand condemned not only of extreme brutality but of being bad policemen."

To See Film This week.

The Postoffice Committee plans to have a showing of the suppressed film later this week.

Meanwhile, the La Follette committee will meet Monday to decide whether to call Chicago police and steel company officials in its investigation.

Murray, in his testimony, branded the charge that pickets stopped mails at Warren and Niles, Ohio, and opened packages, as "absolutely unfounded and viciously false." Murray said:

"Since the calling of the strike a handful of reactionary steel barons, backed by company armies and local police, are precipitating a dozen local civil wars, in their fight against unionism.

"Those die-hards who are being led by Tom Girdler, of Republic Steel Corporation and Eugene Grace, of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, claim to be independent—independent of public opinion—independent of constitutional guarantees of civil liberties."

Murray's indictment of the steel independents contained a prophecy that further bloodshed will come if these companies "are not immediately disarmed." He said:

"A repetition of the Chicago massacre is being prepared by Republic Steel at Youngstown. Sheriff Elser of Mahoning County and Mayor Evans of the city have hired as special deputies all of the thugs and policemen of Republic Steel. Scores of these thugs have been brought into Youngstown from New York, Pennsylvania and other States as deputies, in violation of the Byrnes act."

Briton Twits U. S. On Civil War Debt

London, June 17 (AP).—America's Civil War history got all tangled up with war debts in Commons today—and the analogy was laughed off. Arthur Henderson, Laborite, asked if the chancellor of the exchequer were "aware" of a feeling in the United States that Britain should pay more than "tokens" on the war debt in view of her apparent ability to spend millions on arms.

F. A. Macquisten, Conservative, inquired: "Is he aware there is widespread feeling in this country and the British Empire that Americans ought to pay the debt their States have owed us for the last 50 or 60 years?" He referred to the British-Confederate States financial affairs.

Sir John Simon declined to answer as Commons laughed.

Bituminous Coal Rate Rise Opposed

By the Associated Press.

Opponents of the petition of Class One railroads for a general increase in freight rates argued yesterday that new rates proposed for bituminous coal were near the record peak of 1920.

At a hearing by the Interstate Commerce Commission, August G. Gutheim, of the Western Pennsylvania Coal Traffic Bureau, said the soft coal rates suggested were higher than in 1922, when the I. C. C. ordered a 10 per cent cut from the record peak of 1920.

"The roads are already in a very prosperous condition," Gutheim said.

"Why should bituminous coal be placed at a distadvantage with other commodities?"

New Faces in Congress

Rep. Claypool Answers Queries With Least Possible Verbiage

REPRESENTATIVE HAROLD K. CLAYPOOL.

'There Were a Lot of Candidates and I Won' Is His Explanation of How He Got Into Congress.

By Scott Hart.

When you walk into the inner office of Representative Harold K. Claypool (Democrat), of Ohio, and see him sitting there at his desk you expect a bang-busting interview full of the personality that you have heard is Claypool himself.

For Claypool is a fat man with a brimming and pleasant face. On the particular day, he wore a linen suit, white shoes and a colored-striped necktie. He was fairly reclining in his swivel chair. He was in an excellent humor, just as, they say, he usually is. It seemed that he would bubble some fine stuff in interview.

But he doesn't. The Representative answers questions in short, quick sentences. He conserves his words. He elaborates on nothing. You ask him a question and he answers just that question—he doesn't ramble off into the rhetorical green fields and by-ways.

All of this doesn't impress you as being any particular caution on the part of the Representative. It seems, rather, just to be the way in which he answers questions. But it surprises you, because the Representative has such an easy way of sitting in a chair; he seems so jovial; has such a flare for neckties and altogether would appear to be a first-rate target for interview.

He was asked to relate the circumstances that brought him into politics and to the Halls of Congress. Were there any unusual incidents in the race?

"There was not much to it," said the Representative; "there were just a lot of candidates and I won."

Now, this was perhaps the most striking example of an answer reduced, stripped of all verbiage, to its purest form, in the long annals of interviews with Congressmen. In that pure answer, he waved no flags, touched not on the American eagle nor the rosy-tipped fingers of dawn nor upon any of the things that have made the Congressional Record as ponderous or as tripping as a Congressman's plea for votes.

He said, in the same sparing sentences, that his father once served in Congress and that during those times—1912-18—he was a frequent visitor to the National Capitol.

He said that his family was of long political tradition in Ohio and that he engaged in the publishing of a hunting, fishing and trapping magazine which has national circulation. He mentioned that he was a probate judge in his home town, Chillicothe, and that he once presided over the Juvenile Court. But he wouldn't tell of a single idea he might have had for the management of bad boys.

The Representative ushers you into his office with a smile and smiles on you when you leave. He asks you to come back to see him. And you leave knowing that there are so many things he might have said—which he didn't.

Socialized Medicine Opposed by Doctors

Boston, June 17 (AP).—The American Institute of Homeopathy convention today adopted a resolution declaring it was opposed to State and socialized medicine but that it would co-operate with any other national organization in the furtherance of organized medicine.

Dr. J. V. Gregg Custis, of Washington, newly-installed president, said the resolution was designed to put control of the medical profession in medical hands and not political. State or socialized medicine, doctors explained, meant any control of medical treatment not under the direct supervision of doctors themselves.

Congress Participating In Virginia Dare Fete

Arrangements for Congressional participation in North Carolina's celebration of the 350th anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, the first child of English parentage to be born in America, were announced yesterday by Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), North Carolina.

A Congressional committee of five Senators and five Representatives will attend ceremonies on Roanoke Island, N. C., August 18. President Roosevelt has been invited to make the address. The celebration also will mark the anniversary of the disappearance of Sir Walter Raleigh's "lost colony."

Farm Wife Murdered For Refusal to Obey

Fowler, Ind., June 17 (AP).—State Police Detectives Paul Ruel and Wayne Timmons said tonight Leroy Clark, 23, had confessed killing his wife, Mamie, 21, at their farm home near Boswell this morning "because she wouldn't get up when he told her to."

Clark was arrested after he reported to a Boswell undertaker his wife had committed suicide. She had been shot with a shotgun as she lay in bed. Her three-months'-old baby was at her side.

California Plant Shut By 'Relay' Sit-Down

Selby, Calif., June 17 (AP).—A "relay" sit-down strike closed the American Smelting & Refining Co.'s plant today in a dispute over a foreman. Strike leaders said three shifts of about 20 men each would come and go as usual, but no work would be done. J. H. Stevens, of the C. I. O.-affiliated Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union, which called the walkout, asserted the foreman discriminated against union employes.

Lewis Charges Police Slew 9 'Deliberately'

Chicago Killings 'Friendly Favor to Republic Steel,' He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 17.—John L. Lewis charged tonight the nine victims of the Memorial Day steel strike riot "were deliberately murdered in cold blood by the Chicago Police Department as a friendly favor to the Republic Steel Co."

The C. I. O. generalissimo set forth his accusation in a telegram read to a mass meeting of his followers in Chicago Stadium.

"I am satisfied," the message added, "that the butchery of our people will be legally avenged by the due process of our judicial machinery, spurred by the resentment of the public when it becomes acquainted with the real facts."

Lewis canceled his scheduled appearance before the steel strike rally after Secretary Perkins appointed a three-man mediation board.

He sent his "appreciation of the masterly fight being carried on by the workers in the Chicago area and elsewhere to establish collective bargaining and industrial democracy in America."

"The steel workers of the Calumet region have made their own great contribution to the cause of labor and humanity," he informed the assemblage in the 25,000-seat indoor amphitheater. "Nine of them have given their lives and scores of others have had their bodies maimed in one of the most brutal massacres in the history of the struggle of labor."

The C. I. O. chief contended news reels of the battle between police and demonstrators in South Chicago "conclusively demonstrate" the workers were deliberately murdered.

Into Lewis' speaking role at the rally stepped Lieut Gov. Thomas Kennedy of Pennsylvania, secretary-treasurer of Lewis' United Mine Workers of America.

Strikers, sympathizers and unionists converged on the arena from the city and the strike-embroiled Calumet area of Illinios and northern Indiana.

Federal Board of 3 Appointed To Speed Steel Strike Peace

lish headquarters in Cleveland. McGrady is on his way home from Geneva, Switzerland, and is due to land late today.

The board has no power to compel attendance or subpena witnesses, but Government officials anticipate no difficulty in obtaining testimony and evidence.

"It is unthinkable," Secretary Perkins said, "that anyone should be unwilling to assist in the peace efforts."

Reports President Roosevelt had talked by telephone to Tom Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel, were met at the office of a Presidential secretary only by the statement that the office had no idea whom the Chief Executive had talked to by phone.

With Murray when he visited Secretary Perkins were A. D. Lewis, brother of John L. Lewis, chieftain of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Lee Pressman, attorney for the C. I. O.

"The strike situation is in excellent condition," Murray told reporters.

Meanwhile, John L. Lewis, scheduled to address a labor mass meeting in Chicago last night, called off his speech because of the developments.

Announcing appointment of the board, Miss Perkins said her administrative order was issued under the general mediation powers conferred on her department by law. The board is authorized "to investigate, conduct hearings, make findings of fact and act as voluntary arbitrator if the parties to the dispute so request."

On Capitol Hill appointment of the mediation board met with general praise, although Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said a permanent solution could not be obtained "until the Wagner act is mutualized, imposing equal obligations on both sides." He said the "main question in the Midwest" is a question of "sovereignty, of law and order."

Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, said the companies had agreed with the steel workers on all points except a written contract, and said selection of the board might bring a quick solution through a "witnessed verbal agreement."

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, praised the type of men named to the board.

"If this group can't bring about peace," he said, "something very drastic indeed would have to be done."

Secretary Perkins said President Roosevelt had sent to her the telegram in which Mayor Daniel Shields of Johnstown, Pa., asked that Lewis be induced to withdraw a "murderous element" from Johnstown. She said, however, Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania had advised her the State had ample police protection, some 100 officers, at Johnstown.

She revealed also the President and she had discussed appointment of a mediation board last Monday and had agreed it should be done if peace efforts by Gov. Davey, then under way, were not fruitful.

Similar boards were named in the maritime strike and the textile strike of 1934, she said.

The board will have authority "to investigate issues, disputes, facts, practices and activities of employers and employes that are burdening or obstructing or threatening to burden or obstruct the free flow of interstate commerce." It will report to her weekly.

She described the board as an independent group, "reflecting its own mind, not the department's, and taking no orders from the department."

Taft was a Federal mediator in the strike at the Electric Auto Light Co. in Toledo several years ago. In that disturbance McGrady worked out what is known as the Toledo plan, which Taft had recommended for adoption by his home city.

Strike Leader Says Sit-Down Will Block Back-to-Work Plan

which prevailed when work was prevented, and if we develop that he proper law enforcement officials can give them the protection to work as citizens and taxpayers to which they are entitled, it is, of course, the logical result."

Purnell previously had vetoed a plan for immediate reopening of his mills. He told "back-to-work" leaders he would not reopen the plants until protection had been assured by civil authorities.

Purnell's "no comment" found reflection in a similar noncommittal attitude by John Owens, Ohio C. I. O. strike chief, and by a spokesman at the Cleveland headquarters of the huge Republic Steel Corporation, one of the four independent steel companies—the other two are Bethlehem and Inland — which steadfastly have refused to sign labor contracts with the C. I. O. This is the issue on which the strike was called.

In contrast to the Federal "peace" move, Owens girded his forces for a new strategic attack on steel, threatening a projected back-to-work movement in the great mills of the Ohio Mahoning Valley would result inevitably in a sit-down strike.

The plan, Owens said, called for the strikers to join the back-to-work movement along with non-strikers genuinely anxious to start the wheels of industry rolling again.

Once inside, however, they would refuse to work, "holding the fort" until company officials signed the C. I. O. contracts covering hours, wages and union recognition.

It was not known tonight whether an "armistice" would be called in strike centers pending a decision by the board.

C. I. O. picket line leaders in Johnstown, Pa., shrugged at the suggestion of a "truce" and said their lines would stand fast on the 7-mile front of Bethlehem's Cambria works.

Even as the White House moved to settle the bitter controversy, an ominous note indicating the struggle might spread into two huge new fields of labor—miners and railroad men—was sounded at Pittsburgh.

Clinton S. Golden, Pittsburgh director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said "reactionaries" might force a triple alliance among the steel workers, two railroad brotherhoods and the United Mine Workers of America in an effort to force the steel companies to sign with the C. I. O.

So far, only U. M. W. unionists employed in "captive" or company-operated mines of the steel companies have been called out on strike. Their walkout has affected 19 mines in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, with 9,500 coal miners idle in an attempt to shut off the steel mills' coal supplies.

"There isn't an alliance now—only a friendly relationship," Golden said. "But if the reactionaries persist in their attitude of opposition to the strike, there will be an alliance perfected."

Iowa Plant Closed.

Newton, Iowa, June 17 (AP).—A sit-down strike by workers in the plant unit of the Maytag washing machine plant here resulted in complete suspension today of operations in the production departments. The closing affected nearly 2,500 workers in this city of 11,500.

Takoma Park's Request for Station Fought

Transit Firm Executive Holds Bus Shelter Not Needed.

Improvement of bus transportation and a modern waiting station at Takoma Park, Md. yesterday were urged at a special meeting of the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce. Officials of the Capital Transit Co. were present at the meeting.

President O. W. Youngblood explained that the meeting had been called to receive the report of a special committee which had conducted an investigation into transportation problems after numerous complaints had been received by the civic organization.

John W. Coffman, secretary, declared that the community was not receiving the service to which it is entitled since abandonment of the Kennedy street car line.

President E. D. Merrill of the transit company declared that no shelter had ever been provided for patrons of the street car line and it was felt none was needed for the buses. He said that the company has some 20 requests for extensions of lines into the general Silver Spring area and that suburban service costs about $90,000 annually. The solution lies in collecting the Maryland patrons in smaller buses and transferring them to larger buses at cetral points, he said. Business, he added, does not warrant paying the necessary taxes in order to have buses stop two blocks further into Maryland.

Red Cross Meeting.

Mrs. Mason B. Leming and Mrs. Alfred Steffen, of North Chevy Chase, were appointed at a meeting of the Chevy Chase Chapter of the Red Cross to have charge of preparation for filling five dozen Christmas bags for ill American soldiers in foreign hospitals.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Roger J. Whiteford, chairman of the branch. Reports ofnumerous contributions to various welfare activities were made and Mrs. Whiteford reported that $100 left for the chapter by the late Mrs. Emma Clock had been used to purchase an incubator for the Montgomery County General Hospital.

A trust fund of $50,000 for the benefit of the testator's widow, Mrs. Blanche F. Gearing, for life, is provided in the will of William C. Gearing, of Silver Spring, admitted to probate in the Orphan's Court at Rockville.

The will further provides that at thedeath of the widow $10,000 be given each of their four children, Jessie Lee McDonald, Estella May Lewis, Anna E. Carnay and Grace Elizabeth Dixon, and the remainder of the fund in equal shares to Allie May, Martha Ann and Ernest W. Smoot, children of a deceased daughter, to be paid them when they reach legal age.

Fete Funds Sought.

Campaign to obtain funds to defray expenses of the annual Fourth of July celebration at Takoma Park was begun yesterday by the finance committee. The general committee, headed by Mayor John R. Adams, has asked that each Takoma Park family donate one dollar to the fund.

The program will include a parade, patriotic exercises, athletic events and a marathon, climaxed by a grand fireworks display at night. The affair is financed entirely by voluntary contributions.

A delegation from the Parent-Teacher Association of the Glen Echo-Cabin John School yesterday asked for modernization of the cafeteria at the school.

The Glen Echo Heights Citizens Association will stage a lawn party at 7:30 p. m. today on the lawn of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sands, Walhounding road.

Adjt. G. S. Decker Becomes Major

Promotion of Adjt. Gilbert S. Decker, of the Salvation Army, to the rank of major was announced yesterday by Brig. James Asher, commanding the District Division of the Salvation Army. Maj. Decker's commission came through from Atlanta yesterday while the major was at home recuperating from a tonsil operation.

Maj. Decker has been with the District division since 1929. He was brought here by Brig. Asher to take charge of the Family Welfare Department. At that time Maj. Decker was a captain.

The Salvation Army is the second army in which Maj. Decker has enlisted. He was overseas with the A. E. F. and was wounded in France. It was while serving as a private that the major first came in contact with the Salvation Army.

Dr. Hodge Hill's Rites Held at Glendalough

Funeral services for Dr. Hodge Hill, 80, member of a prominent Virginia family, were held yesterday at his home, Glendalough, 12 miles from Culpeper.

Dr. Hill was for many years resident physician at Mountain Lake, a summer resort in the southwest Virginia mountains. He was unmarried and lived at Glendalough with his brother, Irvin Hill, who is the only survivor in the immediate family.

Navajos Charge Southwest Turned Into 'Zoo;' Demand Self-Government, Collier's Removal

Come to D. C. on Own Funds to Attend Senate Hearing.

A delegation of Navajo Indians, who came to Washington on money contributed by members of the tribes in New Mexico and Arizona, yesterday asserted before the Senate Indian Affairs Committee that their great Southwest is being turned into a zoo for Eastern tourists. But this was incidental to their main object—the offering of a five-point self-government program in which they asked the removal of John Collier, Indian Commissioner.

Paul B. Palmer, of Farmington, New Mexico, an attorney for the Indians, said "our people are virtually enslaved by the present Indian Bureau Administration." Under questioning by Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, he charged "waste and extravagance" in the Indian Service activities "while some of our Indians still eat prairie dogs for lack of food."

Points outlined by Palmer included: Re-establishment of a Navajo tribal council "to take the place of our old council the bureau arbitrarily abolished"; empowering the council to act in all matters affecting the tribe, the removal of Indian agency officials now at the head of Navajo reservations, and re-establishment of the six jurisdiction district self-government setup.

Schools Held Unsatisfactory.

Contending that the Indian Service has not conducted satisfactory schools, Palmer said, "they teach us Navajo songs and dances, but not reading, writing or spelling. In our delegation is a Navajo with a child who has been in school and has not yet learned the A B C's," he stated.

"We must have proper irrigation development or the Indians will never be civilized in a thousand years," Palmer, who said he represents about 30,000 Navajos in New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Utah, told Senator Carl A. Hatch, of New Mexico.

Speaking through an interpreter, Scott Preston, a Navajo, of Tuba City, Ariz., deplored what he called the Indian Service's "big stick" policy. "We would rather start over again on the basis of the treaty of 1868, which is all the law we need," he told the committee.

To a question by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, concerning soil erosion activities on the reservation, Preston said that "most of the money went for automobiles for the conservation service people to take joy rides." He said the Navajos "don't like relief money—we would rather work."

Collier Charges Errors.

Indian Commissioner John Collier interrupted at one point to "have the record show that the witness (Palmer) made numerous gross errors in his statements."

The Indians will be permitted to continue their arguments before the committee today.

Irwin Morgan, of Farmington, N. Mex., son of J. C. Morgan, who is one of the tribal leaders, said last night that the group "has some revelations" to make to the committee today.

He asserted that the Indians live, for the most part, in small log houses, and all together these seem "like a gret beehive." The Navajos, he said, have always been self supporting.

Angry Annapolis Fights to Be Capital in Fact, Take $150,000 Yearly Rent From Baltimore

would benefit Baltimore and the entire State, but this retaliatory measure apparently is to be abandoned.

John L. Martin, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, says he has checked up in Baltimore and has found that the people there as a whole have no objection to Annapolis having the office building.

"It is the moneyed men of Baltimore who own property rented by the State who are raising this squabble," he says. "It is ridiculous for opponents of the office bill to point to congestion in Annapolis and lack of places to live.

"Everything is convenient here while in Baltimore the offices are so scattered that one has to waste a whole day in making the rounds. "Baltimore should be ashamed of itself for its attitude.

"I wish we had a Huey Long here; then Annapolis would get a $7,000,000 office building instead of a $1,000,000 building."

Mayor Phipps says that the proposed office building in Annapolis, instead of being an extravagance, actually would save in the long run.

"The State," he said, "is now paying $150,000 a year for rent. The $1,000,000 for the office building would be retired in 15 years, and the State thereafter would save the huge sum of rent.

"I have made a partial survey and I can find no situation quite like the one in Maryland. Annapolis is the capital, and yet most of the offices are in another city. Certainly it is not that way in the State of New York. The principal offices are located in Albany, not in New York City. The same is true of Harrisburg, Pa., and Carson City, Nev., and all the other State capitals I have checked on.

Blames Realty Men.

"In Baltimore the real estate men have a slogan, 'Why pay rent when you can own your own home and pay for it on rental terms.' We think that is a good argument for the State of Maryland."

Aside from the State Capitol and the Governor's Mansion, all that Annapolis has is the Court of Appeals, the Comptroller's office, the Treasurer's office, the Land Office and the Archives office, which treasures George Washington's sword, ancient flags and other historical objects and records.

In Baltimore are located the Conservation Department, the Health Department, the office of the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, the Bureau of Mines, the Attorney General's office, the Department of Legislative Reference, the State Roads Commission, the Motor Vehicles Commission, the Board of Public Welfare and the Public Service Commission.

The bill to provide a State office building in Annapolis was introduced last March by State Senator Ridgely P. Melvin (Democrat), of Anne Arundel County. Although the bill specified a bond issue of $1,000,000, it did not say that this entire sum should necessarily be spent.

The Maryland Senate passed the bill by a unanimous vote, the six Baltimore Senators lining up with their colleagues from the counties. The House of Delegates later passed it by the required two-thirds majority and Gov. Nice signed it.

Referendum Called For.

It was then up to the board of public works, composed of Gov. Nice, Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., and Treasurer Hooper S. Miles, to authorize the sale of bonds.

At this juncture, the Baltimore City Council and Attorney Jones set out to block the office building project. The city council authorized Sidney L. Traub, a member, to prepare a petition calling for a referendum. Under the Maryland constitution, a referendum must be ordered on a bill passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor if a petition signed by 10,000 citizens is filed with the secretary of State.

The petition initiated by Traub was turned over to Attorney Jones, who filed it May 28 with Secretary of State E. Ray Jones.

In that connection, it has been pointed out here that, under the constitution, the secretary of State is required to live in Annapolis. Since Secretary of State Jones lives at Hancock, Md., it is argued that the petition on the $1,000,000 bond issue is without force.

However, last week in Baltimore Judge Edwin T. Dickerson, of the city circuit court, ruled that the bond issue bill would have to be submitted to voters in November, 1938.

Boycott Is Planned.

Aroused by the efforts to deprive Annapolis of its victory in the 50-year-old fight, the town's leading citizens held a mass meeting a month ago and voted to fight back.

It was agreed to circulate a counter petition, one designed to force a referendum on a bill authorizing a $9,000,000 bond issue for public works in all parts of the State. Mayor Phipps was named chairman of a committee to lead this fight.

Other committees were named, including one to plan for a boycott against Baltimore.

Of the $9,000,000 to be raised by the second bond issue, about $615,000 would be spent in Baltimore. Part of it would go toward the completion of the Fifth Regiment Armory, part toward the Maryland Penitentiary, part toward construction of two floors at the University Hospital.

But the largest sum—$1,170,000—would go to the University of Maryland.

By holding up the $9,000,000 bond issue, the irate citizens of Annapolis felt that they would be wielding a big stick over the heads of those opposed to Annapolis having the office building. The view has been growing, however, that it would not be fair to halt progress in all parts of the State merely to get back at Baltimore, and the prospect is that the petition will be dropped.

The committee, headed by Mayor Phipps, is to meet tomorrow afternoon, and future strategy will be revealed at that time.

Case Aired in Court.

Today the legal aspects of the controversy were argued in the Court of Appeals. The case was taken to this court after Judge Dickerson in Baltimore ruled that the office-building bill be referred to the voters in 1938.

Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, retiring head of St. John's College, is one of a battery of lawyers fighting for Annapolis. He and Noah H. Hillman, representing David S. Jenkins, local publisher, are aligned with Deputy Attorney Hilary W. Gans and Assistant Attorney General William L. Henderson, representing the Board of Public Works.

Their argument is that the $1,000,000 bond issue bill cannot be subjected to a referendum because it is for the maintenance of the State, and the constitution prohibits a referendum on any law making an appropriation for maintaining the State government.

Attorney Jones contends that the bill is referable.

If the court holds that the bill cannot be referred to the voters, and at the same time holds it to be constitutional, that ought to end the battle in favor of Annapolis.

Otherwise, it will become an important issue in the election of 1938, one that may have an important influence on the outcome of the gubernatorial race.

Officials Flee Out of Bilbao To New Capital

the besieged Basque capital of Bilbao declared today more than 500,000 civilians were starving there because food supplies were no longer being issued.

Insurgent sources asserted Generalissimo Francisco Franco, in personal command of the invading forces, had almost completely encircled the city's suburbs.

Refugees added that extremists have started sacking houses in the belief that insurgent occupation now was but a matter of hours.

They said thousands of persons from outlying towns and villages had swarmed into Bilbao, boosting its population, normally around 200,000, to over the half million mark.

Three thousand hungry children, women and aged men fell into the hands of Franco's insurgent navy today as they fled by sea from the terror of siege against Bilbao.

Insurgents said they captured three Spanish government ships carrying the refugees when the ships attempted to slip through the mouth of the Nervion River into the Bay of Biscay.

Rebels Mass at Bilbao.

With Insurgents at the Edge of Bilbao, June 17 (AP).—Thousands of insurgent soldiers, occupying the international airfield at the edge of Bilbao, tonight attacked Basque defenders in the last two hills at the western end of the city.

They battled to fill up the gaps in forging an "iron ring" around the besieged Basque capital and start a speedy march on Santander, 45 miles to the west.

Insurgent shock troops, fully equipped to cope with the Basques in last-stand street fighting, massed at the outskirts of Bilbao awaiting the order for a quick thrust into the capital.

Refugees at Santander.

Santander, Spain, June 17 (AP).—Arrival of thousands of refugees from besieged Bilbao confronted Santander today with a grave food problem. Authorities of the city said they feared they would be unable to cope with the situation unless foreign nations came to their aid.

By choked roads along the Bay of Biscay coast, often under machine-gun fire from insurgent airplanes and shelling, and by water the refugees were swarming into Santander, last important government stronghold on the north coast if Bilbao falls.

Artillery Destroys Town.

Madrid, June 17 (AP).—The "key town" of Chimillas, just west of Huesca on the Aragon front in northeast Spain, was destroyed today by government artillery, government commanders reported.

18 Die in Ship Blast.

Valencia, Spain, June 17 (U.P.).—An explosion aboard the loyalist battleship Jaime Primero killed 18 of her crew and injured 100 others, it was announced officially tonight. The defense minstry said the explosion, which occurred at the loyalist naval base at Cartagena, down the Mediterranean coast from Valencia, was internal, indicating the battleship was not attacked.

Italian Ship Attacked.

Gibraltar, June 17 (AP).—The Italian vessel Madda put in here tonight bearing the marks of machine gun bullets that came, her captain said, fron two Spanish government planes. Capt. Simone said the two planes dropped 30 bombs when his ship was off Oran, Algeria, then swooped down low and machine-gunned the Madda.

He reported there were no casualties, but said the Madda was damaged badly. Scores of bullet marks could be seen on the vessel.

Farmer Denies Murder.

Woodbury, Tenn., June 17 (AP).—John W. Davis, 65-year-old farmer of the "barren country," pleaded innocent in circuit court today to the charge he was responsible for the death, through an illegal operation, of his plow-pulling wife, Jodie, 34. He is accused of second-degree murder.

Appointed Honorary Canons by Bishop the cathedral council, established several years ago.

A statute regarding honorary canons was adopted at the May meeting of the cathedral chapter, after consideration for more than a year by the chapter and council.

"The bishop is authorized to nominate to the chapter for election three honorary canons," said the statute.

"These will be chosen from persons active in the cause of advancing Christian unity and sympathetic with the cathedral's ideals, whose principal duty, as in the case of the honorary canons already provided in this section, shall be as occasional preachers in the cathedral."

Dr. Freeman Widely Known.

Bishop Freeman explained that the "honorary canons" are to be distinct from the regular "residentiary canons" who are under the bishop and the dean, and conduct the cathedral's work and its public worship.

Dr. Freeman is widely known as a writer, is the author of "Robert E. Lee," which received the Pulitzer ward, and editor of the Richmond News-Leader. He long has been a religious leader in the South.

Dr. Brown is professor emeritus of theology at Union Theological Seminary in New York, and a noted writer on religious subjects. Two of his recent publications, "The Church—Catholic and Protestant" and "Church and State," have been prepared with special view to the World Christian Conferences to be held this summer in Oxford and Edinburgh under the chairmanship of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York. He is president of the American section of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work.

For over a generation Dr. Mott has been recognized as a leader of the Christian student movement. He served for ten years as chairman of the continuation committee of the Institute of Social and Religious Research, and at present is chairman of the International Missionary Council. His latest book is "Co-operation and the World Mission."

Speed Proof Costs $14.

Evanston, Ill., June 17 (AP).—Miss Dorothy Bradshaw's car can travel 45 miles an hour. The information cost her $14. Seized for speeding, she claimed the auto couldn't move faster than 25 miles an hour. Policeman Harry Witt took the wheel, stepped on the gas and watched the speedometer needle creep up to the 43 mark. Judge J. M. Corcoran levied an $8 fine and assessed $6 in costs.

Pastor Attacks Nudist Display At Va. Carnival

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., June 17.—Traveling carnivals which exhibited in Winchester recently under the auspices of a fire company were flayed before city council by the Rev. George E. Owen, president of the Ministerial Association, as "vulgar and indecent."

Stating he had been informed by persons who attended that the exhibition in a nudist colony was shocking and indecent, the pastor stated that members of the association he represented and their constituencies were in favor of an ordinance now on the books placing a prohibitive license on carnivals being enforced.

The ordinance provides for payment of $1,000 per week by carnivals exhibiting in Winchester except when special permission is obtained in which cases it is required that a committee view the carnival before it exhibits in the city to deterine if it is fit for presentation.

The pastor asserted that from an economic angle the carnival benefits are "fleecing agencies" and encourage gambling.

Duke's Lawyer Off to U. S.

London, June 17 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor's attorney, A. C. Allen, is on the Queen Mary en route to America, it was disclosed today. It was understood Allen would be gone for at least six weeks and that his mission might have some connection with the Duke's "Ep" ranch in Alberta, Canada.

Pay Juggling In Park Service Set at $83,000

Interior Department Ends Inquiry; Recovery of Most of Money Predicted.

Juggling of pay-roll accounts in the National Park Service has involved $83,000 of Federal funds, it was disclosed last night, following several months' investigation by agents of the Interior Department.

The investigations followed, but have not been connected with, the arrest last April of Reno E. Stitely, former chief of the voucher unit in the National Park Service, who was accused of converting to his own use $6,855.60 of pay-roll funds.

The department disclosed last night its investigation of pay-roll irregularities in the Park Service has been completed and that it expected to turn evidence over to the District grand jury at an early date.

Stitely, 29, who lives in the 2700 block Cortland place northwest, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage following his arrest on a warrant last April 27. He is represented by Attorney William E. Leahy, but because of Stitely's illness no further action in his case has been taken.

Investigators for the department have uncovered, officials said, a long series of instances in which pay-roll checks were issued in fictitious names and then cashed.

A bale of vouchers and checks, allegedly forged, was taken out to the Bureau of Standards for analysis of the signatures by the bureau's handwriting expert, Dr. Wilmer Souders.

A spokesman for the Interior Department said last night he believed most, if not all, of the funds involved will be recovered.

Mother-in-Law Ready to Aid Ensign Ousted for Marriage

Mrs. Woolard Plans Fight for Reinstatement of Young Nash as Naval Officer; Meanwhile, Her Daughter Is Seeking Divorce.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 17.—Mrs. Marguerite Barry Woolard, of New York, said today she was prepared to rush to Washington "at any minute" to intercede for reinstatement of her son-in-law, Charles A. Nash, jr., of Saginaw, Mich., as a naval ensign.

Naval authorities ordered Nash's commission revoked June 3 after they discovered he had married Beulah Kathleen Woolard, Norfolk, Va., society girl, prior to his graduation from Annapolis.

His commission gone, Nash also faced the prospect of losing his bride, when she announced earlier today plans to divorce him or have the marriage annulled.

At her New York home, Mrs. Woolard said she would "leave no stone unturned to see that this boy has his commission reinstated.

"I'm not going to see a home wrecked by a thoughtless, young girl's action," she asserted. "I have talked with Mrs. Nash (Charles' mother) by long-distance telephone, and she is heartbroken."

Of the whirlwind courtship of the young pair which ended in marriage last August at South Mills, N. C., Mrs. Woolard said "you could hardly call it a romance—it was all so sudden."

Meantime, Mrs. Woolard's daughter was prepared to leave Baltimore, Md., for Kalamazoo, Mich., where, she announced, she would seek either a divorce or an annulment.

Holds No Hope.

Saginaw, Mich., June 17 (AP).—Charles A. Nash, jr., shorn of his naval commission for marrying prior to his graduation from the Naval Academy, said tonight he has no hopes of being reinstated after his mother-in-law, Mrs. Marguerite Barry Woolard, said in New York she would do everything possible to seek his reinstatement.

"I appreciate her offer to help me," the former ensign said, "but I am afraid nothing she can do will help.

"I realized shortly after the marriage it was a mistake, but I was willing to carry on.

"I have offered my wife a home, a divorce, an annulment or any settlement. There is nothing more I can say."

Official Admits Winfield Kept Papers at Home

Board Overrules Plea to Dismiss Charges of 'Ticket-Fixing.'

Policeman Welford E. Winfield, former traffic division officer accused of "ticket-fixing," was authorized by his superiors to keep official police records at his home, the police trial board was told yesterday.

At the same time, the board overruled a defense motion to dismiss charges against Winfield, insisting "all the facts" surrounding accusations against the policeman be "brought to light".

Lieut. Walter Thomas, former cheif of the traffic division collateral office, testified Winfield was permitted to take official documents to his home in order to "catch up" with the bureau's work.

An assortment of canceled tickets and warrants found at Winfield's home formed the basis of charges now being heard by the trial board. The prosecution contends he canceled and "adjusted" violation notices "without authority to do so."

"Winfield volunteered to take records to his home in order to bring his work up to date, and he was granted full authority to do this," said Lieut. Thomas. "During periods when I happened to be absent from the collateral office, Winfield was in complete charge."

Lieut. Thomas praised Winfield's record as a policeman and said his character was "above reproach."

Inspector Benjamin A. Lamb, supervisor of traffic during Winfield's assignment to the Collateral Bureau, told the board "many persons" had access to the ticket and warrant files.

Winfield, said Inspector Lamb, "adjusted" tickets with the full knowledge of his commanding officers. He admitted, however, no written or oral order exists authorizing the cancellation of tickets.

Tickets are canceled, he said, through an "understanding" between officers of the traffic record office and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent. When circumstances did not warrant issuance of a ticket, Winfield was empowered to order cancellations under this "understanding."

Nearly a score of traffic policemen were called to the witness stand yesterday to identify tickets allegedly canceled by Winfield.

The trial adjourned late yesterday to be resumed Monday.

Coal Mine Official Slain From Ambush

Jamestown, Tenn., June 17 (AP).—Hidden riflemen shot and killed Caspar H. Woods, 25, general manage of the Zenith Coal Mine, today in a renewal of violence that has broken out spasmodically since the mine reopened March 8 with non-union labor. It was shut down several months previously because of labor trouble.

Woods died from a bullet wound in the back of his head, as he rode to work in a truck.

Congress Talks Adjournment To Dodge Fight

Bolt to Avoid Controversial New Deal Proposals in the Making.

By Robert C. Albright.

A sub rosa movement for sine die adjournment of Congress as soon as routine business is completed, without action on major controversial Administration proposals, gathered headway at the Capitol yesterday.

Privately, some Senators were sounding out their fellows on the plan, and reported wide support. One tentative date set was July 15. Administration leaders disclaimed knowledge of any projected bolt, but said they had heard "some talk." They insisted Congress would not adjourn without consideration of the court plan.

Widespread desire to avoid a prolonged summer session tied into the general Democratic cleavage on Administration issues and may figure significantly in the President's three-day series of peace conferences at Jefferson Island, beginning Thursday, June 24.

Bilbo Predicts "Stampede."

Although the adjournment drive could not be traced to any one group, the name of Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, figured in much of the Senate talk. Several Senators said they had been approached by Bilbo on their adjournment views.

Bilbo was noncommittal on whether he would personally sponsor an early adjournment motion.

"Know anything about cattle?" he commented cryptically. "Well, when cattle stampede, all Hell can't stop them. And I think we are going to have a stampede here when the last of the appropriation bills is passed."

Bilbo, heralded as a stormy petrel when he came to the Senate, has had little to say this session. He is a supporter of the President's court plan.

Court Issue Is Factor.

The court issue continued the one certain key to adjournment. Court plan opponents hitherto have insisted they were unwilling to adjourn until the court issue was definitely disposed of. Yesterday this attitude was changing.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, said he would support an adjournment motion, because he thought adjournment before passage of the court bill could mean but one thing—death of the bill.

Organization of the Democratic court plan opposition into a formal "steering committee" to direct the floor fight was completed yesterday. Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, was elected chairman. Other Democrats named to the group were Senators King, of Utah; Burke, of Nebraska; Van Nuys; McCarran, of Nevada; Clark, of Misssouri; Gerry, of Rhode Island, and O'Mahoney, of Wyoming.

No Republicans were included in the group, although a bipartisan coalition had been seriously considered. It was learned that a separate Republican steering committee will be named to work in collaboration with the Democratic group.

Indications were the court plan would be called up in the Senate this week of June 28. Adjournment apparently will hinge on the trend taken in the court debate, whether a quick vote is had on motions to "postpone indefinitely" or "recommit" the bill, or whether a filibuster actually develops on a compromise.

If the court bill were definitely disposed of, through a motion to postpone consideration or send it back to the Judiciary Committee, either one of which would mean death of the bill, observers believe no amount of Administration pressure could hold Congress longer in session.

Two Test Votes Forecast.

One Senate authority on parliamentary procedure said he thought there would be one or two test votes on the court bill, and adjournment would depend on the outcome of these.

Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, assistant majority floor leader, said August 15 was his offhand adjournment day guess. He said he knew of no plans to adjourn Congress before the court issue was disposed of. Barkley said he had heard one Democratic Senator express the conviction a majority of the Senate would support an adjournment motion.

One mid-Western Democratic Senator, who declined to be quoted, said he had talked to 15 of his colleagues, every one of whom would support a sine die adjournment motion.

Senators known to be promoting early adjournment favor withholding any formal motion until all the appropriation bills and what they called essential "chicken feed," are disposed of. They say this should require a month at most.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Pan American Union presents the United States Army Band, under the direction of Capt. Thomas F. Darcy, with Lucrezia Sarria, Peruvian soprano, in the first summer concert Thursday night. Program of Latin-American music by 18 composers representing Honduras, El Salvador, Panama, Mexico, Peru, Brazil, Cuba, Argentina, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Uruguay, Chile, Venezuela and Haiti.

Drenched by a thunder storm, the Aztec Garden was not the scene last evening of the Pan American Union's first summer concert, which was given in the Hall of the Americas, crowded with guests. The enforced transfer not only deprived the auditors of breezy comfort, but also interfered to a certain extent with the enjoyment of the music, for the instrumentation of a military band falls more gratefully upon the ears in the open air. Nevertheless, appreciation was not wanting in the hearty reception accorded Capt. Darcy's program.

Novelties were plentiful. First performances in the United States were given to a march, "Presenten Armas," by Francisco Zelaya; a caprice, "Panama," by Alberto Gallmany; the overture to Carlos Gomes' opera, "O Condor;" a medley of popular airs, "Mosaico Cubano," by Ernesto Lecuona; a waltz, "Los Mentirosos," by Marcial Prem; a fantasia, "Auras Criollas," by Gerardo Grasso, and a march, "Venezuela," by Augusto Brandt.

Comparatively unfamiliar were Enrique Soro's intermezzo, "Recuerdo;" Justin Elie's "Babylon" suite, and Domingo Santos' overture, "Martita." Popular melodies from the southern republics included Carrasco's "Adios," Fernandez' "Cielito Lindo," the Costa Rican sailors' song, "Lolita," and Velasco's "Recuerdos del Pasado"

It may have come as a surprise to some auditors that "Three o'Clock in the Morning" was written by Julian Robledo, of Argentina.

Lucrezia Sarria, the soloist of the evening, sang three groups, including two operatic arias, "Charmant Oiseau," from Felician David's "La Perle du Bresil," and "Gentile du Cuore," from Gomes' "Il Guarani." The most interesting of her short songs was Teodore Valcarcel's "Suray Surita," based upon Inca themes in the pentatonic scale.

Senorita Sarria has a light lyric voice of pleasing quality which shows to excellent advantage in unexacting songs. It is not of sufficient dramatic caliber, however, to cope successfully with energetic arias, and the high notes are apt to become pinched and acute.

Greater Unity Is Prime Need, 4-H Camp Told

Wallace Regards Creation of 'Efficient Democracy' as Chief Problem.

The establishment of an efficient democracy is the problem facing the country today, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace told 160 delegates to the eleventh National 4-H Camp at their first assembly yesterday morning.

It is up to rural communities to catch "the vision of the general welfare of the whole United States and not of the farmer alone," Wallace explained.

In pioneer times, the Secretary said, individualism was of supreme importance. Farmers were forced to compete for land in order to live. At present, however, co-operation should be the keynote. Agriculture is a national problem which affects city dwellers as well as farmers, he added.

Held in the Department of Agriculture auditorium, the morning program also included a talk by Undersecretary of Agriculture M. L. Wilson, who spoke on the general theme, "Making the Most of Our Rural Heritage." He pointed out that Washington, Jefferson, Madison and other founders of the Nation were farmers.

"Such men made democracy the basis of our national life, and we owe it to them to continue the tradition," he said.

In the afternoon the youths went to the National Agricultural Research Center at Beltsville, Md., where they inspected work in dairy husbandry and animal industry research. Following a picnic supper, they returned to spend their second night in tents pitched in West Potomac Park.

The first event scheduled for today is a play to be presented at 9 a. m. by 4-H Club members of Montgomery County. Dr. P. J. Kruse, of Cornell University, will address the State leaders on "Contests—Their Educational Function, Uses and Abuses." Later the delegates will visit the White House, where they will be photographed.

This afternoon they will attend the Washington-St. Louis baseball game at Griffith Stadium.

Fellowship Awards.

Winifred S. Perry, of Essex Junction, Vt., and Kenneth L. Anderson, of Brookings, S. Dak., won $1,000 fellowship awards yesterday that will permit nine months' study of activities in the Agriculture Department here.

The awards were made under the Payne scholarship for former 4-H Club leaders who have completed college courses in agriculture or home economics.

Group to Seek Aid For Jews in Poland

A delegation of 200 members of the American Jewish Congress will come to Washington this month "to seek friendly action by the United States" on behalf of the Jews of Poland, it was announced last night at the meeting of the Washington council at the Jewish Community Center.

Washington leaders who will accompany delegates to the State Department with their request will be Rabbi Isadore Breslau, president of the Washington Zionist District; Dr. Harry A. Spigel, president of the local council, and Morris Garfinkle.

At last night's meeting, the council also acknowledged receipt of a statement signed by 110 Christian leaders in the United States, appealing to the democratic forces in Poland to take immediate steps to safeguard Polish Jewry.

President Vetoes Sugar Claim Bill

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt has vetoed a Senate bill to give the Court of Claims authority to hear and decide a claim of more than $700,000 by Robert A. Watson.

The claim was for damages arising out of importation in 1920 of 3,500 tons of sugar from Argentina.

The bill, the President's veto message to the Senate said, also would have barred the Government from availing itself of the defense that the Department of Justice "acted without legal authority in issuing directions, or fixing restrictions with regard to such importations."

The President, acting on the advice of the Attorney General and budget director, said he failed to find any "moral obligation" on the part of the United States to recompense Watson for his losses.

10-Million Loan Tenantry Bill Goes to House

Reported by Committee as O'Neal Urges General Farm Legislation.

The House Agriculture Committee resolved months of acrid controversy over the form of farm tenantry legislation yesterday when it reported favorably a bill authorizing expenditure of $10,000,000 in loans to farmers to initiate a program of settling tenants and sharecroppers on the land.

Its action, agreed to Tuesday in conferences of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Congressional leaders, coincided with an appeal to Congress by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, for enactment of general farm legislation at this session of Congress.

At the same conference, it had been virtually decided that such legislation, proposed by the Farm Bureau and embodying Wallace's "ever-normal granary" plan, would be sidetracked for this session.

The tenantry bill reported to the House yesterday differs from the Senate bill of John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, in that it authorizes loans instead of sales, and that it would provide $10,000,000 in 1938 and $20,000,000 each in 1939 and 1940 for purchase and retirement from cultivation of submarginal land.

Leaders predicted there would be little difficulty in enactment of the two bills, each of which increases its land acquisition authorizations to $25,000,000 in 1939 and to $50,000,000 in 1940. Conference agreement on the differences is expected to result in virtually the bill sought by President Roosevelt and Wallace.

"American farmers and the entire Nation will suffer" if Congress does not enact general farm legislation at this session of Congress, Edward A. O'Neal warned in his appeal.

O'Neal denied vigorously the statement of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace made Wednesday afternoon that rank and file farmers are responsible, by their failure to evince interest in the legislation, for its impending abandonment for the session.

"The American Farm Bureau Federation is convinced that farmers are interested, that farmers do not want delay, that farmers do want action at this session," O'Neal said in statements yesterday and Wednesday.

"The American Farm Bureau Federation renews its pledge to its members in all parts of the Nation to make a determined and unrelenting effort to obtain enactment of this legislation at the earliest possible time.

"We have just begun to fight."

O'Neal, denying extensive hearings are needed, said:

"I hope that farmers will understand the significance of the reported decision of Congressional leaders to delay action on the proposed 'agricultural adjustment act of 1937.' I hope that those farmers throughout America who cannot and will not assent to this postponement will lose no time in telling Congress the way they feel about it.

Lizzie of White House Seeks Part in 'Gone With the Wind'

Prompted by Same Things Which Made Author Write the Novel, Roosevelt Maid From Atlanta Tries for Role of 'Mammy.'

The same things that made Margaret Mitchell want to write "Gone With the Wind" are responsible for Lizzie McDuffie's eagerness to play the Mammy role in the movie version of the novel, Lizzie—"third floor" maid at the White House—declared yesterday.

In other words, Lizzie is an Atlantan, she has heard Civil War and reconstruction stories all her life, too, and she "knows the dialect."

"Besides, I know as much about how to be a Mammy as anybody living," she assured. "In my life I've had charge of three sets of children."

The children in whom she is interested most at present, of course, are the grandchildren of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, with whom she is a favorite. They call her Duffie, and the President does likewise. Mrs. Roosevelt, however, follows a different procedure.

"She calls me Lizzie in private, Elizabeth in semiprivate and Mrs. McDuffie before the children," the maid admitted.

Lizzie is 55 years of age—although she does not look it—and is the wife of Irvin H. McDuffie, White House attendant, who attached himself to President Roosevelt in Warm Springs about ten years ago. She did not come to Washington, however, until "after the election."

Campaigned for Roosevelt.

As a friend of hers tells it, "When they were making up the White House staff, Lizzie just came on and had herself made a part of it. She had campaigned for the President before that, though. She made speeches for him all around over Georgia."

Lizzie is somewhat embarrassed because of her White House connections now that she has movie aspirations. "I may be supersensitive," she said, "for everyone seems to think it is all right, but I hate to be giving out interviews, because of my position here.

"If I had the job, that would be different. I'd say my chances are about one in a thousand. I haven't had all my auditions yet. They've promised me another one, though."

Lizzie will have her next audition in New York some time during the coming week, going there from Hyde Park. She previously has had two screen tests and one voice test.

When she wrote asking for her first interview—after having read in The Post that Katherine Brown, Selznick talent scout, was looking for a Mammy character—she did not mention the White House at all. She gave her address as 1600 Pennsylvania—and she did not tell her husband.

She had been to New York twice before her activities became known to him. But he was not provoked when he heard about it. "He wants to see her get the part, for he thinks she has the ability to do it, and it would be a nice recognition for her," the friend said.

Has Support Here.

Lizzie has the support of many other colored inhabitants in Washington. They think it would be a shame if "some one like Ethel Waters, say, came along and snatched the part away from her."

It is to be doubted that anybody is "better prepared" for the important role of Mammy, who figures in the best seller almost as often as do Rhett and Scarlett.

"I've read the book three times," Lizzie declared. "I like every word of it. And then I heard Miss Margaret talk about it on the radio. It was when I heard her that I knew I wanted to be Mammy for the same reasons she wanted to write the book."

Is Well Educated.

In many ways Lizzie is not at all like the "Gone With the Wind" Mammy. To begin with she is well educated—being a graduate of Morris Brown College, of Atlanta, where she specialized in elocution. And she weighs only 190 pounds. Mammy weighed 260 pounds. "But the big Civil War dresses will fix that," she said.

On the other hand, she knows the "good Southern tradition" as well as Mammy herself knew it. For 23 years before coming to Washington, Lizzie worked in Atlanta for the Edward H. Inman family.

Irvin McDuffie's brother, Dr. J. A. McDuffie, is a Washington physician. His nephew, Clyde C. McDuffie, is a teacher in the District schools.

Asked what he thought about Lizzie playing in "Gone With the Wind," the President said he thought it was a "grand idea."

2 Committees Will Map Plans For Jamboree

Final Details for Boy Scout National Session Will Be Completed Today.

Final arrangements for the Boy Scout Jamboree here June 30-July 9 will be made at separate meetings today of the President's committee and the Washington citizens' committee.

The former will be called to order by Commissioner George E. Allen, chairman, at 1 p. m., in the main mess tent of Jamboree headquarters near the Virginia end of Highway Bridge. The other group, headed by Capt. Chester Wells, will meet at 3:30 p. m., in Mr. Allen's office.

Meanwhile, national Boy Scouts of America headquarters in New York yesterday mailed 30,000 invitations to visit the Jamboree camp, inspect exhibits and witness drills and other activities. They went out to Cabinet members, members of Congress, the Diplomatic Corps, State Governors, mayors of the principal cities, Federal departmental officials, leaders in the Boy Scout movement and outstanding professional men and women.

Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, will fly here from New York to attend both meetings this afternoon.

Members of the President's committee are Capt. W. N. Derby, Capt. L. D. Clay, Lieut. A. J. Bolton, Harry Slattery, Dr E. N. Bressman, Capt. Wells, Capt. H. A. Baldridge, Linn C. Drake and Chairman Allen.

On the citizens' group are Capt. Baldridge, Col. E. G. Bliss, Edward Dent, Otto J. Cass, Col. P. M. Ashburn, Ford E. Young, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, Capt. L. D. Clay and Chairman Wells.

Finishing touches are expected to be applied today to plans for meeting special troop trains and buses, receiving distinguished guests, decorating the business section, housing the 100,000 visitors who will come here in addition to more than 25,000 Scouts and leaders, and numerous other tasks.

Hotel and housing arrangements are in charge of L. Gardner Moore. Ralph Van Orsdel is chairman of the committee on reception of the Boy Scouts and their families and friends.

$4,000 Jewels, Rugs Taken With Auto

Norman H. Weidenhamer, of 1773 Lanier place northwest, reported to police his automobile, containing $4,000 worth of rugs and jewelry, was stolen from the 900 block of H street northwest Wednesday.

Police said the machine contained most of Weidenhamer's personal belongings which he was moving to his father's home.

Weidenhamer said he parked his car to do some shopping. He said he was preparing to leave the city for the summer and decided the valuables would be safer in his father's house.

Nursery Schools To Stay Intact, Is Hope of Cass

WPA Deputy Administrator Would Continue Them After July 1st.

Although 500 persons will be dropped from District WPA rolls in July, it is hoped that personnel of the nine Washington nursery schools operated by the agency can be preserved intact, Otto J. Cass, deputy WPA administrator, said last night. The nine schools are attended by 355 children and give employment to about 120 WPA workers.

"We would even like to open another school for the summer months and may be able to do so," the administrator said.

The problem of opening a new school is more one of obtaining suitable quarters than of getting WPA approval, he believes. "We cannot pay rent, and we do not think we can assume responsibility for keeping a whole school building open," he added. The nine schools are housed rent free in Washington public schools, which will be closed during the summer.

The new school would be located in the southwestern part of the city to accommodate between 30 and 40 children, 2 to 4 years of age, whose parents were from low-income groups.

The announcement by Cass follows organization of the nursery school advisory committee, which has announced as its purpose "the sale of nursery schools to Washington"—looking toward their eventual inclusion as part of the public school system. Especially is the committee interested in seeing the nine schools continue through the summer.

Cass pointed out that while WPA projects stop automatically on June 30—at end of the fiscal year—they are expected to be automatically continued on July 1.

"Now I know what it means to drive for pleasure"

Washington, D.C.
May 17th, 1937.

Ford Motor Company,
Alexandria, Va.

Dear Sirs:

I bought my Lincoln-Zephyr primarily for its fresh beauty. To me it is the smartest looking car on the road.

However, after my first extended trip, I came to realize that beauty is but one of the Lincoln-Zephyr's amazing features. It handles so surely and so easily and rides so smoothly that at first I found it difficult to believe. Now I know what it means to drive for pleasure.

The big, quiet, 12-cylinder engine seems to move the car along without the slightest effort. My gasoline bill each month has shrunk tremendously. On a recent trip to Florida, I averaged over 18.5 miles to the gallon.

Last but not least of my delights in this Lincoln-Zephyr is the comforting feeling of perfect security it gives me.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs Bertha Ann Murray

A few reasons why we urge you to see and drive the Lincoln-Zephyr V-12 for 1937:

Smooth-flowing 12-cylinder power . . . with 14 to 18 miles per gallon!

New body-types, now 4 in all . . . with large built-in luggage space, opening from outside.

Decision Slated On Retroactive Pay Law Soon

2 Women Sue for Wages Under Original D. C. Minimum Rule.

Whether the District's recently revived minimum-wage act, which regulates wages to be paid women and minors, is retroactive to the date it was declared unconstitutional in 1923 will probably be decided by Judge Ellen Raedy in Municipal Court soon, it was learned yesterday when attorneys for both sides completed the preparation of briefs and submitted them to her for consideration.

The law was held invalid in 1923, and was only recently declared lawful in a surprise opinion by the United States Supreme Court in a case that did not involve the local situation.

Two women, Mrs. Gertrude A. Perry, a laundress, and Ruth Cornett, a waitress, have brought suit to obtain the difference between what they would have been paid under the minimum-wage act and what they were actually paid.

Opponents of the suits claim the law was actually inactive during the period when it was thought to be illegal. They said employers could not be held accountable for the moneys women and minors are claiming merely because the law is now supposed to be in full force and effect after a lapse of about 15 years.

Miss Raedy is studying the briefs. Attorneys representing the employes are Irwin Bolotin, Samuel B. Brown and William Sturner, while Joseph C. McGarraghy represents the Fairfax Hotel, one of the defendants. The women are seeking to enforce collection of the minimum wage of $16.50 set by the original board before it was disbanded.

Unpublished Journal Is Found On Exploration of U.S. West

Notebooks of Prince Paul of Wurtemburg Discovered by Dr. Clark, of Smithsonian, in Vaults of State Library at Stuttgart, Germany.

Observations of a German Prince upon the American "Wild West" of a century ago have come to light after lying undisturbed for over 75 years, the Smithsonian Institution disclosed yesterday.

Dr. Charles Upson Clark, representing the Smithsonian, discovered the manuscript journal of Prince Paul of Wurtemberg in the vaults of the state library at Stuttgart, Germany. The invaluable record consists of 15 bound notebooks filled with descriptions of aboriginal life beyond the Mississippi during the middle of the nineteenth century.

Few white men with scientific training had penetrated the Great West when Prince Paul forsook court luxury to travel through the uncharted wilderness of the New World.

His first visit was in 1823, when John Quincy Adams, then Secretary of State, gave him permission to explore the West. Five years later he wrote an account of this adventure. The single copy which was printed is now preserved in the Henry E. Huntington library at San Marino, Calif.

Returning to America in 1829, he got as far as the Mandan Indian villages of what is now North Dakota. Again from 1839 to 1841, 1849 to 1856 and 1857 to 1858 he traveled extensively through the West.

The journal examined by Dr. Clark relates to the fourth journey, which began in 1849. Prince Paul writes of going through western Texas, across Mexico to Acapulco, by steamer to San Pedro, Calif., and up the Pacific Coast to Sutter's Fort, near Sacramento.

Early in the spring of 1851 he left the fort for New Orleans by way of Panama and subsequently reached St. Louis. He traveled up the Missouri River and, accompanied by an artist named Mollhausen, followed the Platte and North Platte rivers into the Far West via the Old Oregon trail.

Prince Paul's motives were looked upon with suspicion in some quarters. Skeptics thought he was seeking to establish a German colony in North America or to build up a foreign fur trade. Apparently, however, he was interested only in exploration, for he gave up his military career after his first visit and thereafter devoted himself to the study of botany and zoology.

It appears that he intended to publish accounts of all his expeditions, but death overtook the prince while he was editing his papers. His son, Maxmillian, instead of finishing the task, placed the manuscripts in the royal library.

GlassMonopoly Plans Charged To Nine Firms

Conspired to Fix Prices, U. S. Trade Commission Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission charged yesterday manufacturers and distributors controlling virtually the entire national supply of window glass have conspired to monopolize the business. They also were accused of conspiring to fix discriminatory prices tending to increase the cost of glass to the public.

It was the third time in two days the commission has struck at alleged restraints in major industries. On Wednesday monopoly charges were filed against Schenley Distillers Corporation for alleged buying up of competitors in the whisky manufacturing business. Yesterday the General Motors Corporation was accused of coercing General Motors dealers to buy parts and accessories from the motor concern.

Commission officials, discussing these and similar cases, expressed a conviction that business recovery has stimulated monopolistic practices.

Nine Firms Accused.

The glass monopoly complaint contended the nine leading manufacturers in the United States have conspired since 1935 to fix prices and control distribution of their products.

They are alleged to have adopted a plan of dividing glass purchasers into "quantity buyers," who buy several carloads a year, and "carload buyers," who buy less. The factories sell only to the larger buyers at uniform prices and force the small purchasers to seek their glass supply from the larger dealers, the commission complained.

W. L. Monro Named.

The complaint named William M. Monro as president of the Window Glass Manufacturers Association, and these members:

Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., of Pittsburgh; Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., of Toledo, Ohio; American Window Glass Co., of Pittsburgh; Fourco Glass Co., of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Harding Glass Co., of Fort Smith, Ark.; Adamston Flat Glass Co., of Clarksburg; Rolland Glass Co., of Clarksburg; Scohy Sheet Glass Co., of Sistersville, W. Va., and Blackford Window Glass Co., of Vincennes, Ind. Monro is also president of the American Window Glass Co.

Benny Bortnick's Brother Arrested As 'Numbers' Man

With a leather money pouch strapped to his belt, Samuel Bortnick, 28, 4411 Iowa avenue northwest, was arrested yesterday.

Bortnick was taken into custody in an alley near Fourteenth and K streets northwest by Sergt. George Deyoe, of the vice squad, and Detective Samuel Smith, when he approached John E. Carter, colored, 26, 1407 Tenth street northwest, who also had been arrested.

Deyoe said he had arrested Carter in the Tower Building and had seized a quantity of alleged "numbers" slips, lottery dream books and run-down sheets. When the police were leaving the building with their prisoner, they said, Bortnick came along.

At Police Headquarters, both men were charged with operating a lottery and arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. They pleaded not guilty and were released under bond.

Bortnick's pouch, filled with money, was returned. A tear gas gun was confiscated, police said.

'Dragnet' Search Fails to Give Clew To Mrs. Parsons

Stony Brook, N. Y., June 17 (AP).—Federal agents announced tonight they had completed a "dragnet" search of a 9-mile area around the home of Mrs. Alice McDowell Parsons—a search apparently unproductive of clews to the strange disappearance of the society matron.

As the case of the missing gentleman poultryman's wife entered its ninth day, Inspector Earl Connelly, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said attention would be turned to "likely spots" in "isolated areas."

The Steel Mediation Board.

In instructing his Secretary of Labor to name a mediation board for the steel strike, President Roosevelt gave the only proper response to Gov. Davey's appeal for assistance. The personnel of the board, moreover, is such as to give confidence to all strike participants and—more important—to the whole Nation. Any slowness on the part of leaders on either side to attend the board's meetings in Cleveland would cost them a heavy penalty in terms of public opinion.

Federal mediation was inevitable. As interpreted by the National Labor Relations Board and ignored by the C. I. O., the Wagner act is entirely inadequate to deal with the situation. Existing State machinery was not equal to the task. This Gov. Davey made clear in his telegram to the President when he noted that the steel strike now involves several other States besides Ohio. Of four companies affected, only two have plants in Ohio, while those two also have plants in other States.

Since the Administration has adopted a policy of encouraging collective bargaining, it has a special responsibility to mediate disputes that extend far beyond State lines. The surprising thing is that the President waited so long to take this desirable step. It remains to be seen whether his board will be able to bring about a settlement, but it certainly will effect a clearing of the atmosphere. And, of course, the new effort to obtain a peaceful settlement should be a signal for termination of violence and lawless practices that tend to prejudice the case of any group employing them.

If mediation in the strike area was inevitable, still more so was Federal investigation. Calm inquiries by the Senate Postoffice and Civil Liberties committees will be welcomed generally, the last particularly, in view of reports describing the suppressed newsreel films of the Memorial Day tragedy at South Chicago. Every detail of this and other tragic incidents of the strike should be explored. The public ought to be fully informed when law enforcement either breaks down or runs amuck.

It is well to remember that while the Federal Government has taken over the obligation of trying to settle the strike, the primary responsibility for maintenance of public order rests upon the States. If reports reaching Washington are true, a number of State investigations into reckless police tactics and riotous conduct of strikers would seem to be in order.

The Relief Muddle.

The Senate debate over proposed amendments to the relief bill requiring State and local governments to assume a definite proportion of the cost of WPA projects emphasizes the need for a complete overhauling of the existing system.

The justice of an apportionment of funds which has resulted in giving New York and Pennsylvania the lion's share of WPA money has been sharply challenged. In defense of the small contributions made by these States, it has been pointed out that New York's direct outlays for relief are extremely heavy, whereas some States and municipalities do very little to supplement the Federal funds placed at their disposal. But to that argument Senator Byrnes, sponsor of the 40 per cent matching amendment, replies that the present dual system puts a premium upon long relief rolls to attract funds for WPA projects.

Out of the muddle of confused debate the one fact which emerges as incontrovertible is that the lack of any consistent policy is the chief cause of trouble. A great deal has been said about the importance of recognizing that relief is a national problem and should be handled without regard to sectional lines and boundaries. The WPA, however, does not provide for relief on any such basis; if it did, its outlays would be allocated strictly according to need.

Instead, it leaves local communities to struggle with the problem of caring for the destitute unemployables and a goodly proportion of the destitute employables, too. While the numbers on local relief rolls may attract WPA support, Federal funds are also apportioned with some regard for sectional claims to share the benefits. The result is a hybrid system that is based partly upon need, partly upon considerations of political expediency.

Under our dual system of government, the primary responsibility for taking care of the destitute devolves upon the States and local governments. As fast as possible that duty should be reassumed by the States, as their financial condition improves and the emergency becomes less acute. The insistence that Federal relief funds shall be matched in some fixed proportion by local funds is one of the best possible ways in which to facilitate Federal withdrawal from this field.

It is for that reason primarily that Senator Byrnes has been pushing his amendment to provide for a 40 per cent local contribution to Federal relief projects. "This Government cannot forever go on spending daily more than its income," he says. With dozens of other legislators, he insists that the time has come to balance the budget. If it cannot be done now by asking the States, counties and cities to reduce their demands upon the Federal Government for relief purposes, he may well ask when we can ever hope to do it.

Russia's Deepening Shadows.

Not many months ago a new constitution for the U. S. S. R. was promulgated which, presumably, was to mark Russia's entry into the ranks of democratic powers.

To be sure, it was not entirely clear at the time and has become much more dubious since, just how far the Kremlin was prepared to allow the exercise of those new liberties promised to the Russian people by the latest charter. Certainly the constitution did not in the least end the political monopoly enjoyed by the Communist Party. And there were other aspects of the new dispensation which aroused suspicions that it was more gilden than golden.

Yet, even as a gesture in the direction of the democratic ideal, the promulgation of the Russian constitution of 1936, at a time when democracy was so much under attack elsewhere in the world, was viewed as a welcome development. It seemed to indicate that after 20 years, in which the constructive aspects of the Soviet experiment were coming more and more to the fore, Russia had achieved a point of internal stability that made possible the widening of the frontiers of freedom. That development was all the more welcome since this apparently favorable turn in the domestic situation coincided with Russia's increasing co-operation with the democratic powers seeking the maintenance of world peace.

Of late, however, the Russian horizon has again become covered with ominous clouds. Admittedly, the visibility regarding the disturbing events that are and have been taking place in the Soviet Union is poor. The profound mystery as to the why and wherefore behind the wholesale arrests, trials, purges and executions has not in the least been cleared up by the laconic statements from the Kremlin and the feverish vituperation against the victims by the regimented Russian press. No wonder, then, that a world which has long taken the stability of the Stalin regime as axiomatic has begun to wonder whether a revision of earlier estimates of Russia's internal situation is now in order.

It is much too soon to conclude that Stalin's rule is in danger, although the violence of the assault on enemies of the regime would seem to indicate that the Kremlin itself has taken such a threat seriously. It may even be after the present bloody housecleaning, which has taken so heavy a toll of men near the top in the Russian hierarchy, Stalin will emerge seemingly stronger than ever. The Mussolini dictatorship was consolidated rather than destroyed by the murder of Matteotti; so was Hitler's after the blood purge of June 30, 1934. But it is even more certain that no regime which rests on terrorism rather than voluntary consent, on bayonets rather than ballots, can ever really boast of internal stability. Over the head of the dictator there hangs forever the sword of Damocles. He cannot avoid gnawing fears and uncertainties that can never be dispelled.

Is Stalin suffering from an acute attack of the jitters? Are the ramifications of opposition and unrest as widespread as the latest succession of purges would indicate? These questions the outside world cannot answer. But neither can it banish the suspicion that behind the smoke violent fires may be raging. Certainly, in the light of what has been going on in the Soviet Union, the new Russian constitution now appears to be not a milepost toward stability and serenity, but a sardonic mirage on the edge of a new desert of terrorism and chaos.

Planning For Traffic.

Washington has tried law enforcement, pleading and education—but its traffic accident problem remains unaffected. In all truth, this year it shows signs of becoming worse than ever. There is some encouragement in the fact that during the past two months, the highway death rate has dropped appreciably. But despite this, the number of traffic fatalities for the year to date stands at 51 as compared with 43 for the same period in 1936. Moreover, non-fatal accidents have shown the same proportionate increase this year.

Quite evidently, then, the problems of motor transportation in the metropolitan area are not to be solved by any quick or easy device. With this realization, it is encouraging to learn of a new movement which is promoting a study of the basic causes of traffic congestion. A group of citizens is now circulating among civic organizations of Washington a resolution addressed to the Commissioners, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and Congress. Noting that street congestion here has resulted "in costly delays to business, discomfort and expense to citizens, and a hazard to all who use the streets," the resolution calls for an analysis of the reasons for this congestion as the first step toward long-term adjustments. In effect, the resolution would focus attention on city planning as a possible solution of the traffic problem.

City planning, of course, is a slow process. In many cases, it can do little to improve existing conditions, but it can vitally influence future developments. Thus, for example, little can now be done about the "Federal triangle" bounded by Fifteenth street, Constitution avenue and Pennsylvania avenue. But intelligent planning today can well prevent a repetition of such unwise concentration of densely populated buildings. From the long-term viewpoint this is by far the most important approach to Washington's traffic dilemma.

Sour Victory For The House.

Members of the House of Representatives must have closed their session yesterday with a satisfied feeling. For they had apparently saved themselves from the possibility of having their salaries taxed in the District. And they had made a valiant effort to escape charges of trying to dodge local taxes. By doing so they will probably deny the District a balanced revenue system, increase the burden upon home-owners and continue in effect the indefensible levy upon savings. But these seem to be matters of little concern to the majority of Congressmen.

Considering the sensitivity of the House to the pocket nerve, the District should perhaps be grateful for any sort of revenue legislation. The sales tax is taboo because Congressmen realize that it is unpopular with "the folks" back home. The income tax is anathema, on one hand, because members of the House might be asked to pay it, and, on the other hand, because members would be accused of tax-dodging if they exempted themselves from its provisions. A city so handicapped in raising revenue of its own certainly has a right to expect more liberal aid from Congress than Washington has been accorded.

But the leaders of the House do not consider the welfare of the District in passing upon such matters. The latest program presented by the District Committee was not rejected because of any inequitable or unwise provision. Rather it was turned down by House leaders, before the membership had had an opportunity to vote on it, because, in the language of Representative O'Connor, it would "make us look ridiculous, selfish and small."

If partial destruction of the income tax plan would make House members appear "ridiculous, selfish and small," what must be the public reaction to its complete destruction? When such performances are criticized legislators have no cause for complaint. Yet their uncomfortable position can be fully appreciated, especially in view of President Roosevelt's support of the income tax plan which they sabotaged.

The most discouraging aspect of this incident, however, is not the new tax bill, but the attitude of the House in considering legislation for the Capital City. At every stage in the legislative process the bill which had been carefully prepared by the District Committee was denied a hearing on its merits. The House acted impulsively, arbitrarily, as if the welfare of the District was of no real concern to that body. Of what value are careful surveys and plans for improvement of our obsolete tax system and reform of the hodge-podge local government, so long as one branch of Congress remains so unwilling to co-operate?

The remedy for this problem is by no means clear. But incidents of this sort do emphatically point to the need for a local delegate in the House to dispel prevalent misinformation and establish a better working relationship between that body and the local government.

No News Good News?

According to Stanley Walker, there's no such thing as an exact definition of news. It is his belief that it may be "the repetition, with new characters, of tales as old as the pyramids, and again it may be almost wholly outside the common experience." Even with these conclusions, it is hard to tell which, if either, fits the case of the Norman Dines of New York City.

The New York Herald Tribune recently saw fit to publish as news a story about Mr. and Mrs. Dines, because the husband had insisted on publicly announcing their continued bliss after six years of married life. He had inserted in the Public Notices column of that paper the following ad:

> My Wife, Tesse, not having left my bed and board after six years, I am cheerfully responsible for all debts incurred by her.

Another Manhattan paper had rejected the notice on the grounds that it was simply "stating an obvious fact." It seems even more of a moot question as to whether it really is news. True, romantic reactionaries could argue that, as new characters in an old tale, the Dines are certainly news. Cynics might also contend that marital happiness in this modern age is enough of a departure from common experience to justify notice in the press.

However, such an item might easily set a cock-eyed precedent for what constitutes news. Under such a policy, girls' pictures would be published because they were not engaged; horses would make racing history because they did not win; and city editors would find their Utopia in a world where nothing ever happens.

An exchange says the Chinese invented slot machines 500 years ago. The Chinese are entirely too inventive. It was they who thought up printing, gunpowder and civilization.

Defense Of The C. I. O.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading the letters written on June 16, by Messrs. Harry W. Ranson and Grant Shepherd, in my mind I place them to be one or all of these four: Employers of non-union labor, mouthpieces of the Republic Steel Co., professional union-busters, Fascists.

The former writer had better learn that John Lewis is not the C. I. O., but that thousands upon thousands of honest, intelligent American workers make up the rapidly growing, heroic C. I. O. He better know now that the C. I. O., fighting for democracy, has not as yet killed one man, while the employers and their armed plug-uglies, fighting for fascism, are murdering one or two each day, and sometimes six or eight a day, like the case in Chicago on Memorial Day. This writer had better advise his "Tom" that while he may do some more clubbing of the union workers, he will ultimately be compelled to sign on the dotted line the legal collective bargaining contract with the workers.

To Mr. Shepherd, I would like to say that he had better understand that if there be any "rebellions," they will be instigated by the employers. The workers never start any trouble: it is always the employers. The C. I. O. only asks for that, which every God's creature has, the means of existence. Not to fight for that would be very cowardly and un-American, indeed. Let him always bear in mind that the employers have all the money and with money, under our present social order, everything is possible, including the propagandizing and influencing the people's minds against the strikers. I ask him to find out the truth before he criticizes any one. If our revolutionary forefathers had not struck, against the British "employers" in 1776, where would we be now? In the face of this high-handed exploitation and unemployment and child labor, can any one expect the American workers to fold their arms and beg? And this in the richest country in the world?

GODFREY MONROE.

Playground Reduction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The District of Columbia appropriations bill for 1937-38 as passed by the Senate provides for money to start construction of a junior high school on Banneker Recreational Center but failed to provide money to purchase land to replace that used by the school as recommended by the U. S. Budget Bureau and the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission.

If the school is placed here it will use for a building site and physical education area, fenced in for school administrative purposes, about four acres. This will reduce Banneker from a nine-acre recreational center to a five-acre playground and greatly reduce the facilities available to the public except after the extra-curricular activities are complete in the afternoon about 5 p. m.

Shaw, Garnet Patterson, Cardoza and Terrel junior high schools have no playgrounds and are dependent on the Banneker recreational area for their physical education. To curtail this area at this time would be a grave injustice, in as much as the delinquency in the congested areas is very excessive and largely due to lack of adequate recreational facilities.

Is the District of Columbia so poor that it must economize at the expense of our colored school children? All fair-minded citizens are asked to protest against this steal at the expense of our colored children. The compulsory attendance law imposes an obligation on the authorities to provide adequate school facilities for all.

HOWARD D. WOODSON.

Civil Service Reform.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of June 15 on the "Civil Service Blues" causes my memory to revert to the early years of the civil service reform.

I was among the very first employes of the Government to be recruited through Civil Service, having been appointed as result of the second examination set by the commission. I have watched the operations of this moral reform from its earliest beginning to the present time.

While the reform has not been perfect in its operation, and many disappointed citizens have occasion to join The Post in the chorus of the "blues," yet it has been perhaps as fully effective as any great reform movement calculated to purify public or private morals. It is impossible to divorce the politician from his cravings for spoils. Without spoils he would cease to be a politician.

The colored race might justly lead the chorus of the "blues" against the Civil Service in actual practice. The Federal Government invites all citizens to open and free competition to recruit the classified clerical service, but if the colored applicant should be the winner he is cheated out of his justly earned reward by indirection and circumvention.

Among President Roosevelt's "must" proposals none ranks higher than reorganization of the Civil Service Commission. No feature of this reorganization can be of greater importance than to bring it back to its original purpose, to wit:

"That all places under the Government of a non-policy making character shall be open to free and fair competition to all American citizens, without regard to race, sex or religion." KELLY M'LLER.

Comment On A. F. G. E.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: ". . . a great many now in the Government service have no civil service protection. This means that they can be dismissed with scant notice and with practically no assignment of cause. However, the civil service employe's security lacks much of what might be desired. An economy wave which would lead to a reduction of force may very well mean the loss of his job, however efficient he might be."

Thus states the national secretary of the A. F. G. E., in a radio talk March 6, 1936.

Now the very definite threat of such economy wave faces all Government workers, civil service and non-civil service alike. The Cannon resolution proposes the impounding of 15 per cent of governmental appropriations; Senator Byrnes urges a horizontal cut in departmental appropriations.

Over 1,500 Government workers last Thursday roared their disapproval of these false economy measures and applauded three Congressmen who manifested lack of sympathy with the Byrnes-Cannon proposals.

Seventeen hundred members of the A. F. G. E., through their representatives, have unequivocally voiced their protest of indiscriminate appropriation slashing labeled "economy." For thus taking action against threatened slashing of pay rolls, against payless furloughs, overtime, lowering of morale, impairment of efficiency and against the curtailing of the necessary functions of government, the 1,700 members were suspended from the parent body. Thus the A. F. G. E. further split organized Government workers, repudiated 1,700 members, "emergency" and civil service, for whom it always presumed to speak.

The A. F. G. E. will continue to run its excursions. S. T. A.

Ex-Minister On The Bible.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a former minister who has outgrown the superstitious beliefs taught me before I was capable of critical judgment, I wish to disagree with William Lyon Phelps "that it is an encouraging sign that the Bible remains the best seller among all books printed in the English language." To this writer and to millions of others who wish to promote national thought and scientific knowledge, reading of the Bible only promotes absurd, ridiculous, superstitious beliefs and practices, and stunts the human mind. Think of the absurd doctrines and beliefs that have been compiled into creeds and dogmas and the vast number of conflicting superstitious cults that menace and retard intellectual progress.

I believe it false to assume that the Bible is of supernatural origin, inspired in a sense that no other writing is, or that its record of creation is a revelation to be accepted without doubt or question. There is abounding evidence that man, instead of being created perfect, has over a period of millions of years developed into his present semi-barbaric state but is certain to become more humane and dignified in the future. The Tennessee monkey trial was evidence of the growing conflict between superstitious beliefs and scientific knowledge.

What a comparatively intelligent people we would be if every adult was familiar with the general principles and ideology of evolution and not dominated by the ridiculous beliefs declared from the ancient records of primitive and, in comparison with the best thought of the present age, unintelligent people.

To Suppress Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of June 14 I read a very interesting article written by Mr. Benjamin R. Stickney, jr. His suggestion that our country support an International Radio Commission for the prevention of war propaganda seems to me an admirable one.

I quote from his words, "Such a commission might be composed of ten men, well nursed in their specific fields."

Why not mix in a few women on this commission, Mr. Stickney? Women abhor war more than men. Let us begin to realize that the mothers of men should be the chosen ones to decide on questions of war. This would soon terminate the armament race.

If more of our country's men were giving heed to such serious problems as these, instead of more inventions for "the conflagrations of hell," this would certainly be a better and a saner world. May the time yet come when the Master's words of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men" may be realized because good and true men have done their bit to prevent war for all time.

"Unholy Trinity."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last winter I spent considerable time in reviewing the history of the rise and fall of republics, both in Europe and America. And, after much thought on the subject, I have arrived at the unalterable conclusion that if that "Unholy Trinity," Roosevelt, John Lewis and Farley don't wreck the United States in the next four years, our own republic has a chance to survive for another 50 or 100 years.

But with the Administration's lack of interest in the preservation of law and order, and in protecting the rights of the people against the depredations of the riff-raff and bob-tail rabble which put the present Administration in power, as the Schotchman said, "I ha'e me doots!"

Anti-Noise Ordinance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some of your correspondents have recently complained that their rest is disturbed by various raucous noises, particularly the blare of radios and automobile horns. Upon my request the District Commissioners about six years ago adopted an ordinance which requires that radios in residential neighborhoods must be tuned down so as not to interfere with the comfort and happiness of others.

The ordinance, which is still in force, carries a fine of $30 or 15 days in jail for those who violate the law. All that is necessary to do is to telephone the nearest police station, giving the location of the nuisance and they will attend to it. It has been done.

In London blowing automobile horns is prohibited from 7 p. m. to 8 a. m.

Rule Britannia!

Clarissa Lorenz in the Christian Science Monitor.

WHENEVER the newspapers report fighting in the vicinity of Gibraltar, we think sadly of the guidebook phrase, which we read on our first visit there—"It can hardly be missed." That was certainly true. The very sheerness of that great rocky wall made our ship seem, by comparison, like a piece of driftwood. And yet I felt disappointed that this limestone rock, 2½ miles in length, was not somehow as large as it seemed on picture postcards.

First of all, I had intended to see the famous Barbary Apes, which play about the galleries of the rock, for I had been told that Gibraltar is the only place in Europe, where wild apes are to be found. Some say that these crossed over from North Africa (the straits are only 18 miles wide) when the two continents were still connected. The superstition that English authority will cease when the last monkey has become extinct in Gib is borne out among the natives by the fact that the Government employs two officers to look after these inhabitants.

When we stepped off the tender, an army of jabbering hotel porters catapulted into us. All of them proclaimed in broken English that their hotel was the best and the cheapest in all Gib. We finally chose a porter, only because he looked like that veteran screen comic, Ben Turpin. His large brown eyes were like luminous marbles. Immediately he had "sold" us his hotel, he exchanged his official porter's cap for a civilian's (the former was lovingly slipped into a paper bag!). "Ben Turpin" turned out to be an enterprising fellow. In a heart-breaking voice, and with many flourishes, he explained that our rooms would not be ready until after lunch, when two gentlemen were departing for Tangiers.

Panting in the heat, we followed him up Main street, past rows of hacks, or galleys, as they are called, drawn by frail-looking horses which were day-dreaming. Everybody ogled us. Eyes hunted us down like bloodhounds. Above our heads we caught sight of rows of dimpled elbows resting on cushions fitted to window sills—elbows belonging to the idle curious who surveyed all incoming cargoes like watchful monkeys in coconut trees. Only the pack-donkeys and mules minded their own business. They stood out among this mixed, urban spectacle—the most dignified of all citizens.

I now pressed my point. Let's go and have a look at the wild apes. But the reply was a pair of outflung arms and a voice, saying: "Isn't this enough?" And so it proved, long before we had finished exploring the lower part of Gib. Wild apes, of whatever peculiarities, would have been simply an anticlimax after that. The barbarous colors, the noise, and the overripeness of this little cosmopolis where East clashed with West bore down upon me with full force, as I walked up Main street. Indian and Moorish shops had turned this street into a glorified Monday, or wash-day: Shopkeepers lounged in doorways, surrounded by Spanish shawls, Moorish pouffes and Egyptian runners.

"Won't you buy something at my shop, ladies?" they chanted, with oily smiles.

Weazened little dark-skinned hawkers were selling beads, newspapers, lace, vegetables and postcards. Arabs were shuffling by in fez, burnous and slippers. Indian ayahs, Greek merchants and Moors joggled elbows with European tourists. The scissors-grinder's special little tootle on his fife was but a thin, feeble squeak in the din of the various jazz bands, which screeched away in cafes. The street-organ, playing a rumba, had a better chance of being heard occasionally. Anyhow, we preferred to patronize the little ragged boy who pulled the donkey who pulled the street-organ. He got several of our pennies, which he begged from us, "for the donkey, plis."

We found a grubby little cafe where we watched an overdressed Spanish danseuse singing and dancing to the rhythm of her castanets. And while we watched, entranced, we ate delicious crayfish and prawns, bought from hawkers who came round with large baskets. Suddenly, the street discords and the monotonous blare of jazz orchestras were drowned out by the deafening and triumphant blast of trumpets. We would have said that the atmosphere could not possibly have contained any more sound. But we were wrong. The English soldiers were marching down the street to the gates of the town where the changing of the guard took place every day.

All other activity froze. Great Britain had superimposed itself for a brief moment on this scene of disorder, lending dignity and authority. And, although we were Americans, we felt a thrill of pride. At gunfire, after the working people had left Gib, to re-enter La Linea, Algeciras, and other Spanish territory where they would be searched for contraband, as usual, the great gates were closed.

English trumpets, blowing reveille, woke us the next morning at 5 o'clock, and there followed a pot-pourri of coughing, sneezing, canary singing and rooster crowing, which left us with that anticipatory feeling prior to a concert, when the orchestra is tuning up.

When we said good-by to Gib, it was with little realization how soon "English authority" would be asserting itself, with refugee tents erected on the race course, and "barbed wire forming additional security to the British boundary."

Fair Enough

$25 Or $30 A Year.

YOU CANNOT appreciate the nature of those Congressmen who voted against the local Washington income tax on their own salaries until you realize how small was the price for which they waived their precious right to share the burdens of citizenship.

Mr. Dirksen, the statesman from Pekin, Ill., who fought for the adoption of the tax, estimates, on the basis of considerable study, that the average burden on himself and his colleagues would be no more than $25 or $30 a year. Nevertheless, the boys refused even to consider the tax bill, although all of them are exempt from the State income tax, if any, in their home districts.

Mr. Dies, of Texas, who voted against consideration, is entitled to rather special advantages, even for a Congressman. Not only is he exempt from the State income tax, of which Texas has none, but he lives in one of the eight States having the community property law. This law was the subject of particular complaint in Mr. Roosevelt's recent message on the subject of avoidance and evasion through technicalities having the color of legality.

It is the law which holds that man and wife receive each half of his income for the purpose of tax computation—a peculiarity which enables the citizens of Texas to cut their Federal taxes by more than half in certain brackets.

• • • •

NEVERTHELESS, Mr. Dies said: "I am not willing to submit to it (the proposed District income tax) in addition to the Federal and State income taxes, and I see no reason why members of Congress should not frankly state their position regardless of any criticism they may receive from the newspapers in the District."

Mr. Dies' willingness to pay a State income tax dealt with a purely hypothetical tax, of course, but he said it was not right and just to impose an income tax on Congressmen for the support of the city in which they live much of the time, enjoying special privileges.

Mr. Dirksen caused severe pain among some of his colleagues with his antisocial remarks.

"I do not see," he said, "how you can have an income tax in the District of Columbia that is worthy of the name unless you include the members of Congress and the members of the Cabinet as well as the Federal employes. There are 127,000 Federal employes in the District.

"You know and I know that many of them have lived here 20 years and more. They use all of the services that are supplied by the municipality. When we suggest that they ought to pay something like a fair share of the cost of operating this municipality they throw up their hands in horror as if we were proposing to confiscate their property and their earnings.

"We talk about tax evasion and avoidance. This very day we have appointed a joint committee to investigate. We might stop right here on this matter of tax avoidance in order to bring these people (the 3,500,000 public employes in the entire country) within the purview of the Federal and State income tax."

• • • •

I REGRET TO SAY that, owing to the ambiguity of certain remarks of Congressman O'Connor, of New York, these dispatches yesterday placed him on the side of those who opposed the tax. Mr. O'Connor voted with the minority for consideration of the bill, but on closer inspection of his subsequent remarks I cannot make out whether he favored or opposed the tax on the salaries of Congressmen.

He was very angry at the wealthy tax dodgers who come to Washington to avoid income taxes in their home States and enjoy the low local tax rates, but I am unable to find in his remarks, other than his vote, an indication of his stand on the taxation of Congressmen. To give him the benefit of the doubt, it may be assumed, then, that he is not unwilling to pay $25 or $30 a year, as estimated by Mr. Dirksen, for the enjoyment of the municipal services of Washington and the special privileges which are accorded Congressmen.

This explanation, however, does not alter the fact that by a law which was slipped through the New York Legislature without ostentation a few years ago Mr. O'Connor is entitled to a State pension for his Federal service as a Congressman, although he is exempt from the State income tax on his salary.

The Once Over

All's Quiet On The Potomac.

Miss Perkins, Secretary of Labor, denied there was any wave of strikes."—News item)

The peace of summer fills my soul,
The calm is one the Nation likes;
It comforts me to much to know
There isn't any wave of strikes.
All quiet is the Western front—
The days are tranquil, sweet and fair;
No sign of discord meets my eye—
There is no trouble anywhere!
The flowers blossom in the fields,
The birds and bees are on the wing . . .
(You think you hear some crashing bric
My dear, it doesn't mean a thing!)
The air is heavy with perfumes
Of lavish blooms afar and near;
I listen for discordant notes
But do not hear one anywhere.
My cat is purring on my hearth,
I hark to the canary trill,
But elsewhere the whole country is Without a sound, and oh, so still!
I like to scan horizons far—
How peaceful, happy and serene!
No slight disorders anywhere
To mar the beauty of the scene.
Some nations on the other side
Have riots and a reign of fear—
How comforting it is to know
There's nothing like that over here!
In France the workers, so I hear,
Engage in fistfights on the streets,
But nothing in America
Approaching this my vision meets.
No noise, no discord and no shouts,
Just quiet fields of deepest green;
And, what is more, no labor strikes

L'Envoi.

Ah, Washington's the place to live—
The buildings fill me full of pride—
With all the shutters tightly drawn
To hide what's going on outside!

Across the Atlantic

American Sympathies Found To Have Shifted In Past 30 Years, With British Now Favored; Affects Neutrality Hopes.

By Livingston Hartley.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

WHEN THE WORLD WAR engulfed Europe, American opinion divided abruptly into two camps. As the war continued the feeling between these camps became progressively more bitter, and pro-ally partisanship grew in strength and volume. The many recent studies of how neutrality failed in 1917 all reflect the influence of this rising tide of feeling. It became in the end one of the principal factors behind our intervention in Europe.

If a similar overseas conflagration occurred today, the overwhelming majority of Americans would favor the most drastic legislative measures to isolate our country from it. Our national desire to maintain neutrality, spurred by the lessons of the past, might be expected to be considerably stronger than it was twenty years ago. But how would our people divide now in their attitude towards the European belligerents? This question demands consideration, since it may become a vital factor in determining how long American neutrality can be maintained.

The last thirty years have wrought tremendous changes in our attitude towards European nations, particularly towards Germany and Great Britain. The extent of these changes is not generally realized, either at home or abroad.

Kaiser's Germany Held In Respect Here.

BEFORE 1914 most Americans had a great respect for imperial Germany. Her "thoroughness" and scientific methods were widely admired, and a large number of our professional men chose German universities for the completion of their studies.

This American sympathy and admiration for Germany has been almost completely extinguished today. An undeveloped suspicion of the military policies of the Kaiser's government has become a national revulsion towards Hitler and his methods. German brutality at home and in Spain, Nazi persecution of religion, liberals and leaders of thought, "totalitarian" destruction of freedom and free institutions, Hitler's attacks on democracy, his violation of treaties and his primary responsibility for the existing European war threat, have now created throughout America a deep and widespread hostility towards the Reich. This hostility is reflected in hundreds of American newspapers and in the public statements of national leaders in every walk of life.

In the meanwhile, our national attitude towards Great Britain has developed in the opposite direction. Most of our people had been taught a generation ago that England was our historic enemy. Millions of native Americans remembered that our only serious foreign wars had been against the British, and looked towards London with suspicion. But thirty years have wrought so great a change here that the present "all-time high" in Anglo-American relations reflects the feelings of the English-speaking peoples on both sides of the Atlantic.

Trade And Democracy Among Factors In Shift.

THE REASONS for this change are many and diverse. Among them may be listed mutual trade, the development of true democracy in Great Britain and in the relationship between London and the Dominions, our common effort during the World War, our naval agreement at the Washington Conference which terminated the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and our general realization that Britain is today a bulwark of European peace, stability and democracy. When free institutions are pushed to the Atlantic fringe of Europe it is only natural that our feeling of common interest with the British should increase.

This drastic 30-year transformation of American opinion toward Germany and Great Britain is reflected even more vividly among certain powerful minority groups. Our Roman Catholic Church, for instance, comprises some 19,000,000 Americans, a third of our total church membership. In 1914 the Irish question was very much to the fore, causing great bitterness toward England among the influential Irish-American leaders of the Catholic Church. Many millions of our American Catholics favored the cause of the central powers at the outbreak of war.

Our Roman church today would have potent reasons to favor Great Britain over Germany. While the creation of the Irish Free State has removed the Irish question from active politics and modified the traditional Irish-American bitterness toward England, the Nazi government has embarked upon a systematic persecution of the Catholic Church. A new "Kulturkampf" has begun, in which an American cardinal has been made a central figure. A bulwark of anti-British feeling in 1914 has become an active enemy of Nazi Germany today.

Persecutions By Nazis Influence Change In U. S.

AN INFLUENTIAL proportion of American Jews originally came to our country from Germany. Many of them, including powerful financial leaders, favored the cause of Germany at the start of the World War. Nazi persecution of their race, unparalleled in modern times, has changed this picture completely, uniting American Jewry in a bitter hatred of Hitler's Reich, which would throw their sympathies solidly behind any foe of Germany.

Our citizens of German stock, finally, form a sizable and influential section of our people. Hard-working, earnest and respected, they comprise a majority of the population in many parts of the Middle West. At the outbreak of the war in Europe, the overwhelming proportion of these people became active or passive adherents of their fatherland.

Our Germanic Americans today have a very different attitude toward the Reich. Nazi persecution of freedom and religion, the sufferings of their transatlantic kinfolk and Hitler's ruthless policies at home and abroad have awakened among them a widespread hostility toward the present Berlin dictatorship. Although pro-Nazi societies exist in some of our great cities, they are more than counter-balanced by larger societies of anti-Nazis. It must not be forgotten, moreover, that the great mass of these people participated loyally in our war against imperial Germany in 1917. In view of these changes, it is clear that the Hitler regime has cost the Reich the solid support of Germanic Americans in any new war.

It seems likely, consequently, that the American people would be overwhelmingly pro-British and anti-German if another European conflagration broke out now. German adherents in our land would no longer comprise more than a fifth of our population; it is even doubtful if they would total as much as 5 per cent. Would this one-sided division of American opinion be decisively influenced by our attitude toward their principal allies?

Neutrality Difficult In View Of Popular Bias.

THE PRESENT alignment of Europe does not indicate an affirmative answer. Although France may have lost some of the popularity she enjoyed before 1914, her partnership with Britain would hardly affect "pro-ally" sentiment unfavorably. Russian participation on their side would undoubtedly awaken our deep-seated dislike of communism; the practical influence of such a development, however, would be mitigated by the fact that our most potent "anti-Red" groups are those which are most pro-British.

If Mussolini went in on the side of Hitler, many Italian-Americans would swing to the German camp. But it must be remembered that a great proportion of our people of Italian origin are bitterly opposed to Mussolini and fascism. It would become an open question whether the hyphenated partisans that Rome brought Berlin would balance the adverse influence of our national reaction against Il Duce and his methods. The entrance of Japan as an ally of Germany would only increase the one-sided support of our people for the British coalition, besides raising serious issues in the Pacific which might require positive action by our Government.

This 30-year change in the attitude of American opinion toward Great Britain and Germany cannot be disregarded in estimating our chances of maintaining neutrality. Many seasoned observers believe that we could not today keep clear of a long-drawn-out general war overseas, no matter how strong our desire might be and no matter what neutrality legislation we enacted. Whether or not this view may be justified, we must face the fact that official neutrality toward Europe would rest on a popular basis of almost solid partiality toward one group of belligerents.

War News

By Arthur Robb

Catholic Claims Of Bias.

IF EVER there was a difficult story for the metropolitan press of the United States to present fairly, the Spanish war is it. First of all is the difficulty of getting news that approximates objectivity. Both factions are staffed by foreigners who know all of the lessons the great war taught on propaganda and censorship. From both headquarters come dispatches reflecting the sights, sounds, and thoughts behind each battle line.

And even if the correspondents know that these sights, sounds, and thoughts are partly the product of propaganda for their benefit, censorship is an effective barrier to any translation of their suspicions into cable words. Sometimes the most obvious defects and scars in the local picture can be slipped past the censor by an adroit correspondent; some have been, but in general, a correspondent who wants to keep breath in his body regulations any more than necessary.

• • • •

THE NEWS of the outrages that the Catholic spokesmen emphasize has come from the very newspapers they denounce for not equally emphasizing. No one has succeeded in getting any reliable information that has not appeared months before it becomes point of propaganda. No American newspaper, to our knowledge, approves for a moment the slaughter of priests and religion that seems to be a concomitant of every radical uprising—but no American newspaper has the power to do anything to prevent it, nor by condemnation, to forestall future outrages behind a battle line 3,000 miles away.

As we have read editorials in American newspapers, the general idea seems to be that Spain has been badly misgoverned for many years, that individuals in the Catholic Church, if not the church itself, have been aligned with the misgoverning powers, and that the Spanish people are entitled in their own way to determine how they are to be governed in future. The situation does not seem to be much different from that prevailing in Mexico a few years ago—when some hotheaded spokesmen for the Catholic Church would have liked to see Uncle Sam step in and restore to the church privileges it had lost in the radical revolt. Fortunately, calmer counsels prevailed, both in the United States Government and in the church in this country and Mexico seems to be working out of its troubles and the church in Mexico with it.

It is difficult to understand what the Catholic press expects to gain from enlistment of the secular press as a propagandist for the Franco regime. There is little possibility that newspaper pressure could force the Roosevelt government to intervene, either as a mediator or by economic pressure, on behalf of a Fascist hegemony. There is grave danger that such newspaper pressure might create either a flareback in public opinion against obvious propaganda, or, if subtly done, that it might kindle the war fires again in this country. Our Catholic friends want neither, one may be sure.

Meanwhile, their steady criticism of the daily press for presenting the news as it finds it can conceivably create a new atmosphere of distrust of our journalism. All of the metropolitan cities have strong Catholic populations, a large percentage of whom read their diocesan sheets with some regularity. They read the daily newspapers, statistics would indicate, with more regularity, and they seldom find in them anything hostile to their interests as Catholics. With the majority of editors, we believe that the majority of Catholics share our belief that this war is only incidentally a religious war, and that religion is only one element, albeit a major element, in Spain's struggle for democracy. How long this tolerant view will stand in the face of incessant drum-fire by the religious press to the contrary is a serious question.

• • • •

THE CATHOLIC PRESS cannot be censored for its indignation at a Communist regime which avowedly wishes to destroy religion. That is its natural reaction, but one can expect from the exponents of a tolerant religion a tolerance toward a newspaper interest which must print the news regardless of its incidence upon interested parties. The Catholic editors regard the success of Franco and his German and Italian allies as vital to the speedy restoration of the church to its long-honored function in Spain, and they undoubtedly feel badly when American dispatches relate that the Italian legions could not stand the aerial fire of the loyalist Russian formations. They don't like to accept the news that German airmen bombed Guernica, a city as sacred to the religious Basque rebels as it is to the religious Madrid loyalists. Maybe the Germans did, maybe not—that's one of the things the censor won't let be established one way or the other. Nor is it pleasant to read headlines that your own friends lined up five warships and poured hell into a defenseless civil population; nor that these Communist criminals fight with the courage of the devil and have kept the saviors of civilization from making the conquests of Madrid and Bilbao that they have been predicting for months. But these things are news, they have not been controverted, and they do make headlines. And regardless of how an editor feels concerning the atrocities that are inseparable from war, his feelings cannot long influence his news treatment.

PROBABLY no conflict can be impartially reported to the satisfaction of both participants. With religion involved, the task becomes impossible, even in this country where religious prejudices have reached their lowest ebb in world history. To the average man in the street and to the majority of newspapermen, the place of the church in the Spanish conflict is secondary to the fact that a government elected by methods recognized in this country though new to Spain, was attacked by a group representing interests which American readers believed had been legitimately ousted from their long tenure. That would place American sympathy normally with the established government. This normal sympathy has been accentuated by the fact that the "rebels" have sought and received aid from Germany and Italy, representing a form of government which has few lovers among us. That makes the loyalist government distinctly the underdog, a sentiment which has apparently not been dulled by the patent fact that Madrid-Valencia has received help from Soviet Russia, also antipathetic to American ideas.

No coloring of news was done to create these sentiments. No coloring of news or shift of emphasis is likely to change them. If by some miracle, both sides could be induced to end censorship and permit the free transmission of accurate and complete news, it is possible that public opinion might be changed, and it is also possible that present views of prejudices might be strengthened. The Catholic Church needs no advice on the virtues of patience—but it might not be amiss to mention its application to the present situation. If the wheel turns against the Madrid forces their foes will have their day in the news.

If it does not, organization knows better than Rome how to regain its power and prestige among temporarily rebellious subjects. The American press cannot be and should not be in the church picture.

English Novelist

By William Lyon Phelps

Samuel Butler.

On this day, June 18, 1902, Samuel Butler died without my noticing it. I didn't even know he was sick. I didn't know he was alive. But in the year 1906, walking on the deck of a steamer in mid-ocean, Miss Marian Whitney, professor of German in Vassar College, suddenly asked me what I thought of Samuel Butler. Such a question did not sound like her at all; and I felt as Browning felt when Tennyson asked him what he thought of Shelley. He might as well have asked him what he thought of Shakespeare or of the Alps, or of Europe.

• • • •

Well, it seemed just too bad that the greatest English novelist of the nineteenth century had eluded my observation; I mean too bad for me, not for him. And I confess my shame at this late date, because, while I am ignorant of many things, I think it does indicate that even in the year 1906 the novelist Samuel Butler was not a household word. His fame is not only posthumous, it did not begin in earnest until some time after his death. You see, his greatest work is the novel called "The Way of All Flesh." This he wrote in the nineteenth century, and on his deathbed in 1902 he first gave permission for it to be published, and it first appeared in 1903. As he enjoyed shocking conventional people, I wonder that he postponed its publication.

Mangled D. C. Tax Bill Slated To Pass Today

income tax. Both were adopted by small votes, although the Kennedy sub-committee asked for division balloting.

The chain store tax, copied after the Louisiana State tax, upheld by the Supreme Court, would, in effect, place a levy of $550 a year on most chain stores in the District.

The proposed scale begins at $10 on each store in a chain of five or less and steps up $5 for each five stores up to 20. It then jumps to $100 for chains of from 20 to 30 stores and shoots up to $550 for each store in chains of 30 or more.

The number of stores used as a basis for the tax would be the total owned and operated by the chain not only those in Washington. Hence all of the chain groceries and most of the chain drug stores would have to pay the highest tax of $550 on each store operated in Washington.

Length Brings Objection.

The amendment to the inheritance tax is almost as long as the tax title itself. It was objected to by members of the sub-committee in the ground that it could not be considered intelligently on such short notice.

Nichols pointed out that Dies had ample opportunity to submit it to the sub-committee while hearings were being held

Despite his pleadings, the House voted 65 to 42 to support Dies as against the committee.

The Dies scale of taxes on inheritances begins with an exemption of $5,000 and imposes a levy of 2 per cent on estates of from $5,000 to $10,000 and then graduates upward at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent for each added $10,000. At $100,000, however, it jumps to a flat 10 per cent and at $500,000 to 15 per cent.

The last hour or so of consideration of the bill was marked by frequent motions that the committee arise without completing action, points of order that a quorum was not present, and motions to strike out almost every section of the measure.

Rolls Calls Prevented.

Representative Mead (Democrat), New York, as presiding officer, kept the House in order by counting enough members present to prevent roll calls.

The Federal loan provision was stricken out on a point of order raised by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, on the ground that it constituted an appropriation of Federal funds.

The committee then revised the language to meet the objection, but the amendment to restore the title was defeated by a vote of 40 to 28.

The parking meter division of the bill met the same fate. Representative O'Malley (Democrat), Wisconsin, raised the point of order and an amendment offered by Nichols to restore it with a revision was beaten.

A small fight was waged against the increase in taxes on insurance companies, but it dwindled after Collins read figures as to profits of these companies in Washington.

Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, who was in charge of the bill, made a motion to strike out the business privilege tax on the ground that it was "strictly a sales tax" that would be passed along to the consumer. His motion did not prevail.

Prior to consideration of the bill proper the House debated for an hour on the resolution to adopt a special rule.

G. O. P. Assails Revolt.

Republican leaders seized the opportunity to reprimand the members and the House leadership for the revolt on Monday. Minority Leader Snell expressed the opinion that the House had made a grave mistake in refusing to consider the bill. He pointed out that it could have been amended on the floor.

Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, who steered an income tax through the House in 1931, expressed regret that the Rules Committee, of which he is a member, forced the District Committee to eliminate the income levy and substitute a 20-cent increase in the realty rate.

The House was assailed by Representative Robsion (Republican), of Kentucky, for imposing taxes on the District without allowing District residents to vote.

Representative Cole (Republican), of New York, a member of the tax sub-committee, answered criticisms of the local realty tax and asserted that realty property here bears a larger proportion of the city tax load than it does in most of the States.

Hits Burden on Home Owners.

"In trying to impose a penalty on the landlords here because of high rents," he said, "you are placing an additional burden on the small home owners."

He pointed out that only 25 per cent of the realty property in the District is income producing.

Dirksen defended the income tax and criticized the realty tax increase.

Asserting that the House was flying in the face of all the best tax authorities and the admonition of the President, Dirksen chided the members for discarding the income tax and boosting the realty tax because it is allegedly lower than the rates in the States.

During the debate on a proposal to increase the gasoline tax, Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, observed that the 2-cent rate here is on a par with the Missouri tax.

Representative Bigelow (Democrat), of Ohio, who proposed the 4 per cent land tax, with no levy on improvements, explained that he merely wanted a record to compare with that on a similar proposal made in the House 43 years ago. At that time the single tax got six votes; yesterday the House gave him 21 ayes to 64 noes.

Vanderlip Improved.

New York, June 17 (AP).—Frank A. Vanderlip, sr., was reported at the New York Hospital today to be making "satisfactory recovery." The capitalist entered the hospital yesterday for what his son, Frank A. Vanderlip, jr., described as "observation following an illness in California eight months ago."

U. S. Debt Soars to 36 Billion, All-Time and Unexpected High

Will Be Approximately $1,300,000,000 Greater Than Estimated by Roosevelt at End of Fiscal Year on June 30.

of business Monday to $36,633,907,802 at the close of business on Tuesday came about through the issuance by the Treasury of $851,056,500 in notes and the issuance to the Government Life Insurance Fund of $500,157,956 in bonds on account of the adjusted compensation payment act dealing with veterans' funds.

This latter item added $500,157,956 to expenditures, bringing the total for this fiscal year up to $7,647,335,342. In the remaining 15 days of the month this figure will be raised by approximately $700,000,000 more as the Treasury makes interest payments in the neighborhood of $135,000,000 and debt retirement payments of about $302,000,000, in addition to the ordinary and relief expenditures.

Thus the prospect is for expenditures of close to $8,400,000,000 for this fiscal year when the Treasury closes its books on June 30. This figure, if it is correct, will be less than the expenditures for the year estimated by the President last January, but it will be $200,000,000 or more in excess of the implied revised estimate of expenditures made by the President in his relief message on April 20. In that message he forecast expenditures $295,000,000 less than his January estimate.

Savings Now Doubtful.

He termed this sum the expected savings which would be made because of the necessity for retrenchment resulting from the failure of revenue to come up to estimates during the first four months of this calendar year. There is every indication at this time, however, that the savings estimated by the President less than two months ago will not be achieved.

This, however, can not be said with any certainty until the end of the month. In the first place, the daily Treasury statement as it now stands, as of the close of business on Tuesday, did not reflect the bulk of income tax collections received this week. Whether the income payments will reach or pass the revised estimate of $2,105,000,000 for the fiscal year made by the President in April will not be known until the end of this week. At the close of business on Tuesday the Treasury was $371,000,000 short of that mark. But this sum easily may be reached before the month ends.

The revenue figure set up by the President in April for this fiscal year was $5,224,000,000. Total receipts up to the close of business on Tuesday were $4,744,916,553.

Gold Flow Increases.

Although Mr. Roosevelt has expressed the hope—reiterated earlier this week—of holding the national debt to the peak which it reaches on June 30, this prospect remains uncertain as long as the Treasury continues its gold sterilization operation. Under this operation the Treasury borrows from the money market funds with which to buy imported gold.

The flow of gold from abroad, at least during the present month, has increased instead of diminished. Thus at the beginning of the month the amount of sterilized or inactive gold held by the Treasury stood at $793,861,973. On Tuesday such gold totaled $975,654,677—an increase of $181,792,704 in two weeks. On June 1 it was figured that the sterilized gold fund at the rate in which it had accumulated since December would reach $1,000,000,000 around August 1. Now it appears that this figure may be passed before this month ends.

The flow of foreign gold to the United States, plus domestic production, has brought the Treasury gold stock up to $12,207,000,000—a pile of gold far greater than monetary economists a few years ago ever dreamed that one Nation would hold. The monetary value of this country's gold now, on the basis of the revalued price, is approximately three times what it was when Mr. Roosevelt entered the White House in 1933.

Low Interest Farm Loan Bill Defeat Asked

$832,000,000 of loans already outstanding plus those for the next fiscal year.

"Under such circumstances," he added, "it would of course be necessary to call upon the United States Treasury to make good its guarantee of the corporation's bonds."

Myers added that the 2 per cent difference between the return the Government obtains from the mortgages it holds and the 3 per cent it pays on farm mortgage bonds is not sufficient "to absorb operating expenses and losses, and to provide adequate valuation reserves."

"In view of this and other factors," he went on, "it is suggested the time has come to taper off the interest subsidies to the Federal Land Bank borrowers, with a view to discontinuing them at the earliest practicable time.

"It is recognized, of course, that emergency conditions resulting from drought or other causes exist in some parts of the country each year.

"To meet situations of this sort something more than a reduction of interest is required. In many instances farmers are unable to make any payments at all. In addition, it may be necessary for the Federal land banks to advance sums to pay taxes and the insurance premiums on the farm buildings.

"Under such circumstances it is necessary to grant the borrower an extension of time, frequently for a year or more, on the whole amount due or advanced—interest, principal installments, taxes, insurance and other advances."

The Governor also emphasized the restricted number of farmers to whom the bill would be of benefit. He said fewer than 10 per cent of the 6,812,000 American farmers are borrowers from land banks. Of the borrowers but 95,300 are delinquent. Thus, 1.5 per cent of the farm population in need of such assistance would be benefited, he said.

Myers concluded with the statement that farm prices have improved steadily since 1933 and that it is more important to the farmer to obtain good prices for his products than to receive "subsidies in interest rates."

Pontiff May Protest Bulgar Heir Baptism

Castel Gandolfo, June 17 (AP).—Pope Pius, waiting to see what form of baptism will be given the heir to the Bulgarian throne, probably will protest if the child is baptized into the Greek Orthodox Church, prelates said today. The heir was born yesterday to Queen Giovanna, wife of King Boris.

Prelates recalled that the Pope made a sharp protest in 1933 when the first born of Boris and his queen—a girl—was given an Orthodox baptism. Catholics held that Boris broke a promise made to the Pope when the Pontiff authorized his marriage to Queen Giovanna that their children would be baptized Catholics.

Bob Burns Says:

I had an uncle who always wanted to be a Beau Prummel. He thought he was too purty to work on a farm and never would work. Finally, one day he went to town and bought a new suit and saw himself in a full-length mirror for the first time. His heart fell plumb to his shoes. He says, "My goodness, do I look like that?"

He went back home and before long he had the finest farm in Crawford County. One day while my uncle was workin' in his field a salesman stopped and says, "Brother, you sure have got a wonderful cornfield. You oughta get one of our Frankenstein scarecrows to protect it." My uncle says, "I don't need no scarecrow, brother. I'm out here purty much of the time myself!"

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

"I have been referred to as a 'conservative.' But I have progressive ideas; at the same time, I see no reason for running the car at 90 miles an hour and demolishing it"—Charles I. Stengle, president, A. F. G. E., during an informal talk in which he referred to the seven suspended lodges issue as a thing of the past so far as he, personally, is concerned.

• • • •

And Col. Stengle doubtless meant what he said: That the issue over the seven suspended liberal lodges is out of his mind until the Philadelphia convention in September. But it isn't out of the minds of Government employes; it is the spearhead of their conversation—that is, of those who take an interest in the goings-on of the lodges. It never has been emphasized strongly enough that there are literally thousands of Government workers here who belong to no lodge and who, perhaps, never will. This group must become tired to tears of the current overshadowing emphasis the "Government" columns place on the lodge activities.

But this doesn't mean that the undoubted invasion of the Government white collar field by Lewis' C. I. O. isn't a compelling matter to other thousands. Hundreds of them are fanatical about it—seem to eat and sleep on the thought.

Their conjectures are wide—they wonder what policy the C. I. O. will adopt with respect to strikes. And some of them have wondered what the Government (somehow forgotten) would do in the event that thousands of its personnel walked out one bright morning. They wonder if the Government would take the bull by the horns and order mass dismissals. They ponder on how strongly the C. I. O. would be willing to go to bat in such an eventuality.

And, too, they ponder on how the A. F. G. E. is standing up under the strain of the current suspension "mess," as one high A. F. G. E. official has called it. Stengle seems unworried. Already, he says, more than 275 members have been "salvaged" from the wreckage of the seven lodges let out last Saturday.

More important, he points out that lodges will be set up in the agencies where personnel of the seven suspended groups are employed. Already six lodges have been lined up in these fields. The seventh is assured. And since the lodges were suspended, four brand new locals have been established, the national office announces.

These are in Bedford, Mass. (Veterans' Hospital), Hartford, Conn. (Internal Revenue), Hartford (us-(Internal Revenue), Hartford (Custodial).

And for his state of mind, Stengle says that almost everywhere he goes people congratulate him on his action with regard to the suspended lodges. He seems unworried.

Those with viewpoints inclining to the national A. F. G. E. leadership point out that the A. F. G. E. has nothing to fear because of the nature of the C. I. O. and the nature, generally, of Uncle Sam's white collar employes. These persons do not think the C. I. O. will be much of a magnet for the personnel—particularly the civil service class of the personnel—because of the extreme militancy of the Lewis organization. It was thought that most of this class of workers are of too conservative nature to follow when the action gets fast.

It was thought that the C. I. O. would have particularly hard sledding in the Veterans' Administration, which is regarded as ultra-conservative and almost entirely for the status quo. Its easiest sledding was foreseen in the New Deal agencies and among some of the less stable groups of regular agency workers.

Others, with the A. F. G. E. slant, saw thousands of white collar employes hesitating to join with a labor organization. Some were willing to go as far as the fairly conservative A. F. of L., but would stop short of the aggressive C. I. O., it was held.

Other street corner ponderers of the situation are frankly wondering how long the seven "rebel" lodges would last under C. I. O. sponsorship. These people point out that in the C. I. O. "they would have a boss who would be a boss." The seven suspended lodges have been removed for "individualism." The observers wonder how they would stand up under strong discipline. John Lewis can say a most emphatic "No," it was reminded.

And the music goes round and round!

Practical Tests In Police, Fire Forces Urged

Commissioners Would End 'I. Q.' Examinations for Promotion.

The District Commissioners yesterday proposed that practical questions be substituted for "I. Q." tests in promotional examinations for members of the police and fire departments.

The move is expected to increase the chances for promotion of veteran policemen and firemen. Hitherto, oldsters on the forces have been at a disadvantage when forced to compete with younger members blessed with better schooling.

As it is now, mental tests count 20 per cent in the promotion examinations, practical questions on regulations and actual work count 30 per cent and experience and fitness count 50 per cent.

In a letter to the Civil Service Commission the Commissioners suggested that the "I. Q." tests be supplanted by practical questions intended to show the applicant's ability to "draw correct conclusions from given facts" and to "express them understandably."

According to the suggestion, the practical questions would count 50 per cent in the examination. Experience and fitness would count the other 50 per cent.

The Commissioners also proposed that the service requirements for promotion be revised in the following manner: Privates would serve 6 years before becoming eligible to take the examinations for sergeant; sergeants would serve 4 years before they could take the examinations for lieutenant; lieutenants would serve 3 years before becoming eligible for promotion to captain.

The requirements now are 5, 2 and 1 year, respectively.

In their letter, the Commissioners proposed that the promotion examinations be held every two years, or sooner if the list of eligibles becomes exhausted. They asked that the next examination for police be held in October and that the next examination for firemen take place in October, 1938.

Auto Dealers Vote Sunday Closings

At a special meeting of the automobile dealers of Washington held last night at the Hay Adams House under the auspices of the Washington Automotive Trade Association it was voted to close automobile sales rooms, new and used service stations and used car lots on Sundays and holidays from the first Sunday in July until the first Sunday in October.

Sunday closing of automobile establishments in Washington on Sundays and holidays has long been agitated, but up to last night no definite action was taken. The custom has arisen for sales and service establishments to keep open not only evenings, but Sundays and holidays as well, with the result that members of sales organizations had no time for their own activities. Beginning this coming Sunday all automobile salesrooms in Baltimore will be closed, as well as in many other cities.

Church of God Plans New Church in Capital

Anderson, Ind., June 17 (AP).—The Rev. E. E. Perry, of Detroit, was named president of the board of Christian education by the ministerial assembly gathered here for the Church of God International Camp Meeting.

Meeting officials said the board of church extension and home missions had decided to erect a new church in Washington, and construction plans will be drafted immediately.

Wanderer, Aged 2, Glimpses Spring; Found by Police

Spring and the vitality of youth caused Howard Foster, jr., 2, to get out of bed, unlock the door of his room and go out at 6 a. m. yesterday.

While his parents slept, Howard pulled on a pair of red rompers, manipulated the lock and ventured out into the glorious morning.

Birds were chirping and life was a song to the young fellow as he pranced along unaware that his awakened parents were flooding police stations with calls.

Kiwanis Club Plans Survey Of D. C. Slums

Aroused by the National Capital's deplorable slum conditions, as revealed to them at a recent meeting by fellow members, the Washington Kiwanis Club yesterday decided to dedicate itself to a campaign of improvement.

This was made plain at the weekly luncheon meeting at the Hotel Mayflower when President George P. Mangan announced that the board of directors had authorized creation of a fact-finding committee to study slum conditions.

"Realizing the high importance of the personnel of this significant committee," said President Mangan, "I am giving serious study to the selection of members and chairman."

Three weeks ago Dr. Oscar Blackwelder informed the Kiwanians of a trip made by five outstanding members of the club into the slum districts. They were escorted by Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent of police.

Chairman Mike Uline, of the under-privileged child committee, reported on activities Kiwanians have initiated in order to give pupils at the Weightman School recreational advantages. Graduation exercises for seven of the Weightman School pupils will be held Tuesday morning and he urged member to attend.

Three new members were welcomed into the club by Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty. They are Claude Livingston, Carl J. Bergman and Harry L. Brown.

Compromise Made In Viner Tax Case

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals said yesterday that alleged income tax deficiencies of Harry Viner and the Arcade Sunshine Co., Inc., both of Washington, have been discharged through acceptance by the Attorney General of compromise offers.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue had assessed Viner $6,105 from 1927 through 1931, and the company $11,302 from 1929 through 1931.

The board determined Edward R. Alexander, Washington, was $933 deficient in 1933 income taxes. The bureau had assessed him $4,037. The board reduced to $1,705 a $1,822 assessment on the 1933 income taxes of George E. Hamilton, also of this city.

War Veterans Favor Inman For New Post

Election to Office Will Be Held in Buffalo During August.

Edward K. Inman, a member of the Department of the District of Columbia, Veterans of Foreign Wars, last night was recommended for the post of junior vice commander-in-chief of the national V. F. W. organization. The recommendation was embodied in a resolution adopted at the department's eighteenth annual convention held in the auditorium of the old Interior Department Building.

Inman, a vice president of the National Tribune and Stars and Stripes, is already a national committeeman of administration from the Fourth District, V. F. W. Elections for the post to which he was recommended will be held at the national encampment in Buffalo, N. Y., in August.

The District department also adopted resolutions favoring stricter observance of legal holidays by Government departments. Other business conducted at the convention, which will hold its final meeting tonight, was concerned with organization problems.

It was announced that Congressman B. Carroll Reece, of Tennessee, will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the Ladies Auxiliary of the District V. F. W. tomorrow night at the Colonial Hotel.

Former Policeman Commits Suicide

George Sorber, 40, a former policeman, committed suicide yesterday afternoon, a little over a year after he had been dismissed from the police force. His body was found by Rolla Cummings, 623 Tewksbury place northwest, in the woods in the 6300 block Sligo Mill road.

Police said Sorber had shot himself through the head with an Army .45 revolver, acquired while he was serving in the Army in Manila several years ago. A note, found by the body, was addressed to "the squad." It stated Sorber was taking his own life and was dated 4:30 p. m. yesterday. A coroner's verdict of suicide was announced after the body had been taken to the morgue.

Sorber had been on the police force from January 6, 1923, to February 26, 1936. Recently he had worked as a taxi driver, and his cab was found a few hundred yards from the body. He lived at 918 M street northwest.

Liquor Store Held Up Again by 'Lone Bandit'

Washington's "lone bandit," 'slim, dapper and carrying his pistol in a leather holder, held up the Cosmos Liquor Co. in the 1700 block Columbia road last night and escaped with $184 in cash.

The robber got $40 from the pockets of Samuel Rosenberg, proprietor, and $9 from the clerk, Edward Mootsman. He then took $135 from the cash register and made his escape on foot. Rosenberg said the gunman previously had held him up last April.

Replacement Of 205 Cars Is Forecast

P. U. C. Learns Question of Antiquity Only One Involved.

Edward A. Roberts, New York City consulting engineer, told the Public Utilities Commission yesterday that 205 Capital Transit Co. street cars now in operation will have to be replaced within the next three years.

When questioned by Riley E. Elgen, P. U. C. chairman, Roberts explained the cars would have to be retired because of their antiquated style. There was no matter of safety involved, he said.

The New York engineer, who testified for the Capital Transit Co., was the only witness to take the stand yesterday as hearings continued on the transit company's application to raise the price of tokens from four for 30 cents to four for 35 cents.

Hired by the company as a consultant, Roberts said he had examined street cars of each type operated and had divided them into three classifications. He declared that 461 of the cars were of "good" design, 97 "fair" and 122 "poor."

Three reasons stood out for putting cars into the "poor" category, he said. They were longitudinal seats, center entrances and heavy weight.

Average age of the street cars now in operation is 29.2 years, Roberts' testimony showed. The oldest car examined, built in 1899, was classified as of "good" design.

With only technical testimony being introduced the 5-cent fare suggestion was not touched on. Roberts is expected to finish testifying today. He then will be submitted to cross-examination.

Fare Boost Opposed

The Federation of Business Men's Associations last night went on record against a raise in streetcar fares until there has been an improvement in service. At the meeting last night at the Hamilton Hotel, Melvin C. Sharp, executive assistant of the Potomac Electric Power Co., pleaded for the "earnest cooperation and understanding" of the public in the fight of the Capital Transit Co. to improve service and raise transit rates. Although agreeing with Sharp that the transit company is entitled to a "constitutional return" on its investment, Chairman Louis Obergh, of the federation's public utilities committee, asserted that a proper valuation of the company's holdings should be made and a rate base established before any increase in fares could be authorized. "The company has not given adequate service on the present fares," Obergh said, "and until it can show that its service will improve, should not be allowed to increase its rates."

The federation also approved the Lonergan bill providing for the annual inspection of automobiles operating in the District and announced its support of a sales tax.

Chairman Arthur Clarendon Smith, of the outing committee, announced that the annual outing of the federation would be held July 15 at Broadwater Beach, Md.

Van Duzer to Study Hazards at Schools

Charges that children in more than half of the District's schools are inadequately protected from traffic hazards will be investigated jointly by the Police Department and Department of Vehicles and Traffic, it was reported last night.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer assured members of the school board yesterday he would take steps to comply with suggestions contained in a lengthy report from principals of 123 schools.

Hampered by lack of funds, his department, Van Duzer said, has been unable to erect ample warning signs in the vicinity of school buildings.

Youth's Deft Hands Bring Life To Cardboard Cows and Horses

CAMILLO MASSONI.

Camillo Massoni, 21, Happy at Work in Project Sponsored by the National Youth Administration.

The long, deft fingers of Camillo Massoni, 21, daily turn out tiny cardboard or wooden horses, cows, sheep, houses, the things of a rural landscape, and Camillo says that at last he has found what he wants to do.

The slender, dark-complexioned boy is one of many young people at work on a "portable and visual demonstration of a conservation project" sponsored by the National Youth Administration. This is a before and after glimpse of a rural scene.

In the "after" demonstration are green fields and regimented streams, well-ordered woodlands and fat cattle. The houses are prim. In the "before" demonstration is the disarray of a landscape unregimented.

Camillo's long fingers fashion the fat cattle and shape the prim houses. It is work that seems as delicate as watch repairing. At the start, several young people were put to doing this work, but now it comes to Camillo alone. He made such excellent horses and cows, houses and sheep that the assignment was left to him. And that is well, because in this, Camillo has discovered what he wants to do.

A long time ago, when he was quite young, he would fashion objects from cardboard and wood, but he never thought of earning money by it. In his present enthusiasm, he takes a cardboard cow, or a horse or house to his home at 215 Fifth street southeast, and works in overtime. On the next day, the animal, or maybe the house, is placed in its proper landscape setting by his sister, Emma, 19, who is employed at the project.

The houses have minute detail. You will see this when you stand up close. From a slight distance, the houses seem too tiny for any thought of detail. One of them has a real screened porch; many of them have columns on the porches. It doesn't take Camillo long to do this. The simpler ones, he says, can be completed in half an hour; the more detailed ones require two hours.

The designs for these model landscapes were worked out by Dave Williams and Karl Jensen, of the N. Y. A. Project Division. They were executed by Ray Heaton, an expert modeler. Yesterday afternoon they were putting in a lake ad a few sailboats that Camillo had fashioned.

Cave Safer Place Than Feather Bed In Thunder Storm

By the Associated Press.

The Weather Bureau spoiled yesterday that snug sense of security afforded by a feather bed—and covers well over the head—in a summer thunder storm.

But Dr. W. H. Humphreys, the bureau's expert on atmospheric electricity, offered a couple of gilt-edge substitutes:

A cave.

The bottom of a railroad cut.

A recumbent position in most any ditch is a good idea, he said, and a steel-frame building is nearly as safe as the all-metal room.

Any house is better than an open field but a tree is dangerous company when the celestial fireworks begin.

The most harmless kind of lightning, Dr. Humphreys said, is the famed "ball lighting."

Depression's Over For Md. Graduates, Statistics Reveal

The lean years of the depression for graduates of the University of Maryland have passed into history.

This was shown yesterday by statistics released by officials of the College Park, Md., institution. Graduates this year have the best opportunities for employment since the "boom" days prior to 1929, according to the announcement by university authorities. Out of 289 students who received diplomas at the commencement exercises June 5, 201 already had offers of jobs, the statistics disclosed. This year, for the first time since 1929, a number of large industries resumed their practice of sending out personnel representatives to interview members of the senior class. Three departments at the university were able to place all of their graduates—the College of Engineering, the Department of Business Administration, and the Department of Chemistry.

D. C. to Stop Misdemeanor Lorton Terms

Will Place Prisoners in Jail or Occoquan, Huff Reveals.

Shift Follows Dispute Over Confinement Of Ratcliffe.

Drastic changes in the placement of District prisoners were initiated suddenly yesterday following immediately upon the release of Thomas H. Ratcliffe, convicted forger, from Lorton Reformatory.

The action leading to his discharge revealed a condition tacitly criticized yesterday by the Department of Justice, in which some prisoners sentenced to one year or less are being confined in Lorton—a penitentiary for long termers—because of overcrowding in the District Jail.

Misdemeanor prisoners hereafter will be confined in jail or Occoquan workhouse, regardless of crowding, it was revealed.

The sudden release of Ratcliffe threw into confusion plans for a habeas corpus hearing which was scheduled for 10 a. m. today in Alexandria. Col. William L. Peak was supposed to bring the prisoner before Federal Judge John Pollard, who was to hear arguments on the legality of his incarceration and decide whether Ratcliffe should return to Lorton, be sent to District Jail or go free.

Now, however, Ratcliffe's slate is clear, as far as the District is concerned, even though he was being held here last night for Baltimore police, who recently filed a detainer against the man.

Chronology of Case.

Chronologically, the Ratcliffe case, whose outstanding effect will be to tighten up the District's incarceration system, runs as follows:

On September 15, 1934, he was convicted in Police Court on three charges of false pretenses and sentenced to 90 days each on the first two and 180 days on the third. The 90-day terms were to run concurrently, following which he was to begin serving the 180 days.

On October 19 of the same year he received a one to three-year term in District Supreme Court on another false pretenses conviction, with the provision that he serve the time after the short terms were completed. At the same time he received still another sentence in District Supreme Court of six months to one year to run concurrently with the longer sentence.

Another sentence was meted out to Ratcliffe on November 28, 1934, when he was convicted in District Supreme Court of forgery and uttering and given one to three years, also to run concurrently.

On January 21, 1935, Ratcliffe was transferred to Lorton, presumably because of overcrowding at the jail. His sentences on the misdemeanor charges—false pretenses—still had several months to run.

Confinement Held Illegal.

In demanding a writ of habeas corpus, Ratcliffe, thorough attorneys Lowell J. Bradford and T. Brooke Howard, argued that immediately he entered Lorton he began serving the felony terms. Lorton's position was that first he must complete the sentences begun at the jail, then start on the long stretches.

Bradford and Howard held that it was illegal to confine the prisoner in a penitentiary to serve time for a misdemeanor.

Judge John Howard, at the June term of United States District Court for the eastern district of Virginia, granted the habeas corpus writ in Alexandria last week, ordering Col. Peak to produce Ratcliffe in court this morning.

Yesterday, however, after being informed of Judge Pollard's action, the criminal division of the Department of Justice advised Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of District penal institutions, that Ratcliffe apparently had a sound case, whereupon the prisoner's release was ordered.

In the face of this development attorneys were unwilling to predict what course will be taken this morning when arguments on the habeas corpus writ are scheduled to open—with the principal character missing.

DISTRICT WHOLESALE CORP.

Classic of Sea Hits Bull's-Eye At the Palace

'Captains Courageous' Is Ranked Among Great Films of Year.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"Captains Courageous" is a great picture.

Primarily, this subject is the character study of a small and unruly boy, who needed drastic correction of his viewpoint toward life and his method of living it, but beyond that it also is a surging and tumultuous panorama of the life of the Gloucester fishermen plying their trade out on the Grand Banks, where both the ocean and the men were rough. Into this merging of two extremes of the social scale—the small boy and the sailors—there has been woven a degree of human and heart interest that few pictures are able to attain.

The son of a rich man and adoring father, but a rather baffled one, Master Harvey conducts himself on the theory that he can transgress all of the rules of the school in which he is enrolled and, if caught, buy his way out. He is a surly, hypocritical, lying little prig whom everyone detests. Going one step too far, he is expelled and returned to his father, who sees in a trip to Europe a possible solution. Off the Grand Banks the youngster falls overboard and is rescued by a fishing smack.

Still a Little Snob.

Aboard the schooner he is as cordially disliked as he was ashore. He labors under the delusion that he owns the place and comports himself accordingly. Then Manuel, a rough Portuguese fisherman, takes him in hand and by persuasiveness, kindness and a fine example, gradually brings the spoiled kid to his senses. Once awakened to the realities of life and the struggle that some less fortunate than he have for existence, Master Harvey begins to see the light. A tremendous affection springs up between him and Manuel and slowly spreads to the rest of the hardy crew.

Even then, Harvey cheats in a contest between Manuel and "Long John" in a bet on the day's catch by tangling "Long John's" lines. Manuel, outraged by this violation of all the rules of honest sportsmanship, pays the bet and throws back into the sea all of the fish Harvey has caught. That was about the last of Master Harvey's duplicity.

Briefly, that is the outline of the major theme of the story. But there are other sequences of quite a different nature—the jockeying of the rival schooners for the best fishing grounds, the moonlit nights aboard Capt. Disko's boat, after the day's toil is done; the squalls that spring up and toss the sea into mountains of angry water and then the race back to Gloucester after the hulls are full. These all have been executed with a realism and a believability that make "Captains Courageous" a classic of its kind.

A Tragic Boat Race.

It is in the final race back home that an accident overtakes Capt. Disko's schooner and Manuel, overboard and entangled in ropes and nets, meets his death. This is the final touch that made a man out of Harvey. Ashore he lights candles at the altar for his beloved pal, and, reunited with his father, tries to explain why he must return to the fleet and carry on, at least, part of the time, with the fisher folk.

Despite the fact that the film is enacted by practically an all-male cast, it exerts a terrific tug at the heart. It is played with unimpeachable fidelity by a cast of rare selection. Freddie Bartholomew is a perfect Harvey and seems to grasp every shade of meaning in his exacting role. Lionel Barrymore is a gruff, but kindly, Captain Disko, with the patience of Job. But it is Spencer Tracy, as Manuel, who does the finest and most variegated interpretative work of them all. Tracy's performance should put him in the running for the next Academy award.

Support and Subsidiaries.

Others in the cast who contribute notably to the play's effectiveness are Charles Grapewin, Melvyn Douglas, as the millionaire father who could not fathom his son; John Carradine and Mickey Rooney, cast as Captain Disko's young son who found it a bit difficult to penetrate the nature of the strange lad who had been dragged aboard his father's schooner. There can be no more quibbling with the acting than there can be with the marvelous photographic effects that have been obtained on the open seas. The picture has been given a musical background that augments its appeal even further.

Despite the "road show" length of the feature, it is supplemented on the screen at the Palace this week by a Pete Smith short-reel subject, "Golf Mistakes," featuring four of the world's greatest golfers; a "Popeye" cartoon comedy and the regular release of the "Events of the Day" making a complete program of two hours and a half.

This is a bill that can not be too highly recommended to the interest of those who enjoy the best the cinema has to offer.

Holland Lifts Embargo On Exportation of Gold

Amsterdam, June 17 (AP).—The Netherlands today lifted the restrictions on the exportation of gold which have been in effect since September, 1936.

The Bank of the Netherlands, acting on the authority of the minister of finance, stated it was prepared to allow unrestricted exemptions from the export prohibitions laid down on gold coin and bullion by royal decree. A spokesman for the bank said the change had been made possible by the recent inflow of gold to the bank.

Ideal Player Sought for Role of Detective Crane; Capital's Aid Asked in Casting Screen Character

The President of Universal Pictures Appeals for Help in New Problem; Sylvan Theater to Open; Lampkin to Sing; Old Chaplin Film to Be Revived; Notes.

UNDER date of June 15, there arrives at this desk a letter from R. H. Cochrane, president, Universal Pictures Co., Inc., Rockefeller Center, New York, which seeks to add this column and all of Washington to his casting department. In order to present Mr. Cochrane's problem in complete form, I am reproducing his letter in full.

BELL.

"Dear Mr. Bell: As you undoubtedly know, the New Universal is under the necessity of finding new personalities for the screen. What is more, it has been very successful in finding them.

"Now we are faced with a problem that is slightly different, and, frankly, I would like to have your assistance in solving it. You see a lot more pictures than I do. It must be that in your routine of reviewing you have come upon just the player we are looking for.

"Here's what we want. We are starting a series of pictures which will have for their hero a new type of detective. His name is Detective Crane. He was invented by Jonathan Latimer, who seems to be the leading writer of mystery novels at the moment. Two stories that he wrote and which we are going to produce with Detective Crane in them are "Headed for a Hearse" and "The Lady in the Morgue." Both are Doubleday Doran best sellers. If the titles are too grisly, we shall change them. They were great for the Crime Club, but may not be for the screen. Detective Crane, however, is a screen natural. If you haven't become acquainted with him and haven't read either of these books, I shall be glad to send you a copy.

"We need just the proper player to do Detective Crane. You know the "Bulldog Drummond" series started Ronald Colman toward his great popularity, and "The Thin Man" did a lot for William Powell. Detective Crane is bound to be one of the big figures of motion picture history this coming year.

"Have you in mind a player—he doesn't have to be on our lot—who would be ideal for this part? Would you like to ask the readers of your column about it?

"We aren't going to decide in a hurry and I would very much appreciate any suggestions you might make to me. Sincerely,

(Signed) "R. H. COCHRANE."

Not being familiar with the fictions to which Mr. Cochrane refers, it is feared that this department will not be of much help until it has received the books which he so generously offers to forward. In the meantime, if Capital readers of mystery novels have any pertinent suggestions to make as to the player best suited to the role of Detective Crane, we shall be glad to relay them to Mr. Cochrane.

The National Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument Grounds will open its 1937 Summer Festival season on Tuesday, June 22, with a performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta of "H. M. S. Pinafore," by the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group. The opera, which will be conducted by Miss Wentworth, will be presented at 8:30 p. m., preceded by a festival concert by the Washington Civic Orchestra, conducted by Samuel Page Ford, at 8.

Master Phil Lampkin, the fork-handed baton swisher at Loew's Capitol Theater and "the youngest musical conductor in America," comes through with the slightly disturbing announcement that, beginning today, not only will he present a new "three in one" overture, but also will oil up the old larynx and during a vocal interlude join Lew Davies in a duet.

Heretofore, Prof. Lampkin has confined his solo appearances to special trumpet numbers, but today will be something else again and more or less of a revelation to his admirers.

The overture number will consume a full 12 minutes and include every conceivable kind of music that Phil could lay his hand to in making the special arrangement which his boys will play. Don't say I didn't warn you!

In addition to "Dark Angel," the Little Theater next week will revive an original Keystone comedy, "Caught in a Cabaret," in which the star is Charlie Chaplin. The 22-year-old two-reeler also has in its cast such bygone celebrities as Mabel Normand, Chester Conklin and Mack Swain. The film has been reissued with musical accompaniment and in its new form is being shown in Washington for the first time.

* * * *

"All Quiet on the Western Front" having been the prize-winning picture of its year, it is interesting to note that its sequel is about to be generally released.

A handsome announcement folder states that the world premiere of "The Road Back" was celebrated at the Globe Theater, in New York, last night. The story, like that of "All Quiet," is by Erich Maria Remarque and was directed for the screen by James Whale. The adaptation was made by Robert C. Sheriff and Charles Kenyon. Several of the cast of the original picture appear in the present film.

* * * *

"My Baby Says It's So," a new Warren and Dubin song introduced by Dick Powell in the Warner Brothers production of "The Singing Marine," already has crashed the "hit parade" of popular radio numbers listed by Variety. The immediate success of this tune seems to bear out, at least in part, insistence from Burbank that the "Marine" score is one of the best Powell has had.

Balm-in-Gilead Note.

Well, all of those premature film openings earlier in the week will make today a little easier, anyhow.

Rosendahl Urges U. S. To Develop Dirigibles

Boise, Idaho, June 17 (AP).—A United States air expert who saw the dirigible Hindenburg burn urged today a definite American program of lighter-than-air ship construction.

"The loss of the Hindenburg," said Commander C. E. Rosendahl, of the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., "put the future of dirigible transportation squarely into the hands of the United States"

Rosendahl was a speaker on the first day's program of the three-day conference here of the Northwest Aviation Planning Council

7 Injured Seriously In Collapse of Stand

Madison, Wis., June 17 (AP).—Seven Madison Central High School senior boys were taken to hospitals and several others were treated by doctors on the scene following the collapse this afternoon of a photographer's stand on the school grounds.

About 50 of the 190 seniors had climbed on the temporary stand at an entrance to the school when the structure collapsed, throwing most of them about 8 feet to the ground. A photographer was directing the placing of the students for a graduation picture.

Suit for $10,000 Started by Woman Over Hotel's Chair

A chair that was not there when she sat down was cited by Mrs. Hattie E. Palmer, 818 Upshur street northwest, as the basis for a $10,000 suit filed in District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Palmer said she was registering delegates to the Daughters of the American Colonists at the headquarters at the Carlton Hotel when the incident occurred. She blamed a bellboy for carelessness in removing the chair. Washington Properties, Inc., operator of the hotel, was named defendant.

Because of the fall she sustained, Mrs. Palmer, through Attorneys D. K. Offutt and W. A. Lowe, declared she had to be taken to Emergency Hospital.

Culbertson Team Ahead In Semifinals Match

Budapest, June 17 (AP).—Ely Culbertson's New York team led Hungary by 730 points tonight at the halfway point in their match in the semifinals of the contract bridge championship for open teams of four.

The United States team from Minneapolis, playing in the other bracket of the semifinals against Austria, was trailing by 1,650 points at the halfway point.

Sugar Dumping Charged.

Amsterdam, June 17 (AP).—The Netherlands government began investigation through diplomatic channels today of charges by Surabaya, Java, sugar interests that Philippine producers were exporting large quantities of sugar to China at "dumping prices," in violation of the recently signed international quota agreement.

Does His Best Work in New Film

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 17.—Some of the rackets that flourish here heat my blood. Especially phony "casting agencies" which harvest riehly from gullible people with movie ambitions. A few days ago an elderly woman who works as a housekeeper came to me for advice. She had answered a newspaper ad and was greeted by a glib-tongued crook who assured her the studios were starving for women of her type. She paid the man $25 to list her name with his so-called agency.

WILLIAM POWELL.

Two months had passed since his promise of ". . . a lucrative job within two weeks . . ." and the woman investigated. She discovered that the gyp artist in question had been getting away with his racket for years, operating first under one name and then another. The Better Business Bureau and the Producers Association have filed complaints, but with the guile of a fox and the gall of a polecat the trickster has managed to dodge prosecution and carry on his steal.

The housekeeper's $25 are gone. But if you have a friend who is Hollywood-minded, just give him this tip: The only agency that officially employs "extras" and "bit" players is Central Casting Bureau. And Central doesn't charge a fee for registration nor a commission for work obtained.

On an M-G-M set, the cast was kidding little Judy Garland because she has to attend the studio school. A few minutes later, Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell were trying to solve a crossword puzzle and found themselves stuck for an 11-letter word meaning "endangered." Everyone joined in the search, but it wasn't until Judy piped up with "Jeopardized" that the missing word was found. From then on, the kidding about Judy's school duties came to a conspicuous halt.

George Raft was chuckling today as he told me about a pal of his from Brooklyn, a gag-man who made such a success in Hollywood that he decided to hire a private secretary. He advertised for "a refined girl, college graduate, good speller," and the next day interviewed the first applicant.

"You're a college graduate—a good speller?" the illiterate-but-successful gag man demanded. The girl nodded. Leaning far back in his chair, he regarded her with Brooklynish skepticism "Okay, sister," he challenged. "Get going. Spell me something!"

Lots of people are persnickity about their choice of entertainment. Some won't go to a cowboy movie and others turn up their noses when you mention murder mysteries. But I think the tops has been reached! A studio official asked Jane Withers if she would like tickets to the preview of her own picture. Said Jane: "What's the other picture on the bill?"

Sauce for the goose is not always sauce for the gander. I can prove it. The other morning I dropped in on William Powell and Luise Rainer, making "The Emperor's Candlesticks." Luise had a phonograph on the set (stealing Joan Crawford's tricks) and before each scene she played a record to get "in the mood." For the dreamy scene I watched, she prepared herself by playing and replaying "Liebestraum," it worked. Luise was tremendous. But Powell, usually most dependable, blew his lines three successive times. He wore a most harassed expression, and after the third miss, the director asked: "What's wrong, Bill?"

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 17.

ENTERRRISE: Contrary to reports in the Nation's newspapers last week, Warner's did not purchase the screen rights to "Room Service" for $250,000 . . . The purchaser was R. K. O. The price is said to have been $255,000.

* * * *

REGRET: The Spanish Consul in New York and his Rumanian wife were playing bridge last week-end . . . "It's simply terrible," the consul's wife complained, "when I married my husband he painted such a nice picture. A philosopher he was going to be. And now—look at my philosopher. He wants to go back and fight in Spain—with a gun!"

* * * *

WEALTH: Jack De Ruyter phoned the Stork Club from Virginia Beach and asked the band to play "Trust in Me." . . . A telephone was plugged in near the band stand and a waiter held the mouthpiece close to the leader's station . . . A newspaperman passed nearby. "Tell me," the waiter asked eagerly, "is there any chance yet for the loyalists at Bilbao?" . . . "I hope so," the reporter sighed, turned to the mouthpiece—and emitted three loud razzberries!

* * * *

AMITY: One of the stories not being sent out by the Simon & Schuster publicity department was an order received for ten copies of Dale Carnegie's best seller, "How to Win Friends and Influence People." . . . The order came from one of Pittsburgh's most notorious bawdy houses.

* * * *

FORESIGHT: Perhaps License Commissioner Paul Moss, who refused to license burlesque houses here, will win the suit being brought against him by the Minskys for the issuance of those licenses . . . Some indication of what the decision will be could be found at Minsky's Republic Theater on West Forty-second street yesterday—where a complete new show was being rehearsed.

* * * *

TRIUMPH: Eugenie Schein, who teaches modern dancing at Hunter College, has been attempting for more than a month to see a rehearsal of the Music Hall Rockettes so that she could learn how professionals train . . . Each appointment made subsequently was canceled, because Miss Schein was busy arranging passage for her annual trip abroad . . . Yesterday the disappointed instructress phoned the Music Hall to cancel the appointment made for next Monday, as she was leaving for Paris Saturday on the Ile de France. . . . She won't be disappointed for long, however. On Saturday all 46 of the Rockettes will sail on that same ship—on whose sundeck they'll rehearse the routines they'll do for the Paris exhibit.

* * * *

FANCY: Jackie Osterman is doing an imitation of Fred Astaire at the Mirador. "In this scene," Osterman told the customers, "you must imagine that there's a beautiful park here. You've got to imagine the set—just like Morris Gest imagined that there'd be an audience at 'Lady Precious Stream'!"

* * * *

APOLOGY: Sam Levene, the shot-string producer in "Room Service," met Jed Harris, who had given him his first stage job, in "Broadway." . . . "You're the greatest man in your field," Levene gushed . . . "G'wan," Harris replied, "I was out to see Mervyn LeRoy and he showed me a picture you gave him, autographed to 'The Greatest, the Most Talented,' etc." . . . "Yeah," Sam explained, "but there I was quoting a passage from 'Idiot's Delight'!"

* * * *

ANGER: Harris, incidentally, went to England to meet George Bernard Shaw and had a long discussion with the famed playwright in which he offered some criticism . . . Shortly thereafter Shaw met Alexander Woollcott and told him of being introduced to Harris. "But," the playwright said, "I don't think Jed likes me." . . . Woollcott then enlightened him, informing that Jed Harris had severed a million-dollar partnership with Crosby Gaige—all because Gaige had made a slighting reference to the immortality of Shaw's plays.

* * * *

AMBITION: Charles Laughton is very much disturbed because the editors of Time, in describing his personal traits, were not very much impressed by his masculinity . . . Laughton, when reminded of this by a house guest last month, showed his visitor a room equipped with a sandbag, bicycle and weights . . . "Yes, I read that item," the star stated, "and that's why I'm practicing. I'll show those editors when I face them." . . . "You're practicing what?" the puzzled guest asked . . . Laughton struck his Capt. Bligh pose. "I," he shouted, "am practicing—boxing!"

* * * *

YOUTH: A Yale senior whose parents are of the Greenwich, Conn., social set was advised by his father that this summer, instead of the usual European trip, the lad would have to secure a job and spend his vacation months learning how to earn a living. A job was secured for him at the Knox Hat Co., in Norwalk . . . Three hours after he reported for work the disconsolate youngster returned to his home and confessed that he had been fired. "Because I came to work in our Packard car," he explained. "Also—because I came to work without a hat!"

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Letting the Opponents Work.

North's hand may appear very strong, in the deal shown below, and South's very weak, but South had to make the final decision as to whether the hand should play for part-score or game. North's opening bid of one notrump was very nearly a complete statement of his values; his raise of spades completed the picture. South bid three notrump because he might have made his two-spade takeout without the King of diamonds, and North returned to spades because of the greater safety at a good major suit. The excellence of the bidding was matched by the precision of the play.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A Q 5 4 ♡ A 8 7 ◇ Q 10 6 ♣ A K 5
♠ J 2 ♡ K Q J 9 ◇ 9 5 2 ♣ Q J 4 3	North West East South	♠ 9 8 ♡ 4 3 2 ◇ A J 7 3 ♣ 10 9 6 2
	♠ K 10 7 6 3 ♡ 10 6 5 ◇ K 8 4 ♣ 8 7

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 N T	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 N T	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the King of hearts, dummy winning with the Ace. Two rounds of trumps cleared up that situation, and declarer looked around for means of limiting the diamond loss to one trick.

The most obvious way consisted in finessing the ten of diamonds and depending on West to hold the Jack. South would have adopted this plan, had no better presented itself. But after some thought he saw a safer way!

The Ace and King of clubs were cashed, and a low club ruffed by South. The opponents were then let in the lead with a heart and permitted to cash their two tricks in that suit. Now West had to lead a diamond, and could not prevent South from winning two tricks in the suit. If he led the nine, dummy would cover with the ten; if he led a small one, dummy would play low. In either case East's Jack would be trapped.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

23-Year-Old Girl Has Been Married Man's Sweetheart for Four Years; Asks What to Do Now.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 23. For four years I have been going with a man of 32. He is married but lives in horror of his wife. She is merely a housekeeper and not really his wife, because she shows him no love. They have two children, whom he loves very dearly. When I first met this man I was very young but I knew at once that I loved him. In fact, we were very much attracted to each other. I tried to become interested in others but the harder I tried to forget him, the worse it became.

• • • •

Soon, through no fault of our own, we became intimate. We are very suited to each other. He has stayed away as long as six months at a time; and I have gone away, too, but it seems no use. He always come back to me and says he loves me. I hope, from this sketch, you will be able to understand our predicament.

• • • •

I have other chances at happiness, as I'm considered very attractive; but with my heart in his pocket, other men just don't seem to click. What should I do—try to make a life of my own or wait around for him? He says he wants a divorce, when it's possible, but he doesn't seem to be doing anything toward getting it, so far is I know. I want your candid advice. I don't want to go on forever with this "backstreet love."

PATRICIA.

DEAR PATRICIA: You are, to use a well-worn phrase, "wasting the best years of your life" on this man and this backstreet romance. The man, to use still another well-worn phrase, has his cake and is eating it, too, while you have nothing but a few crumbs snatched at intervals and by stealth from another woman's table. Break off the association, by all means, and make an honorable investment of your youth in the most promising of those "other chances at happiness." M. H.

She Regrets Misstep.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband, child and I lived in a certain community for over a year. From the first we were moderately friendly with another couple, some ten years our senior. Christmas we went to their home for cocktails (though none of us drink, as a rule) and when I went outside for air, the other woman's husband followed and kissed me. We were both surprised. There had never been the slightest suggestion of flirtation between us. I had thought him an absolutely faithful husband, kind, gentle and fine . . . Several times during the following week I met him in the neighborhood and each time he referred to the incident of the kiss, apparently determined to keep alive the emotion it had evoked. I told him it could go no further, as we were married.

• • • •

Shortly afterward we left for the South. When we left he seemed mournful and unhappy. And I found myself thinking of him constantly, as I had plenty of time for dreaming in the Southern sunshine. My own husband seemed imperfect and unsatisfactory by comparison. . . . In April they came down supposedly on a business trip, but actually, so the man said, to see me. The four of us were constantly together and though I never saw him alone, we exchanged notes and occasional stolen confidences, when dancing and so on. The thing that puzzled me was that, while declaring his great love for me, he seemed to wish to be secretive about it. To me, he seemed perfect. I worshiped him and would gladly have let the world know.

• • • •

After we came back North, we made a date and met one afternoon. The memory of that afternoon shames me unspeakably in retrospect. I was so cheap, bold and easy—and I had always been shy, timid and decent. I had always been moral to the point of prudery, but I thought I glimpsed paradise then . . . His wife came to me later and said he had told her everything. She recited details . . . He told her he had never said he loved me, that he had no hope or intention of marrying me and that his whole interest was to see how far I would go. I hate him. This is all so ugly, but I do want to get it out of my system—it rankles and poisons so.

• • • •

They've left town but two branches of their family are still in the community. They give me long, accusing looks and I'm afraid, ashamed and humble. I feel so cheap and common; and I had thought I was experiencing a fine, noble love . . . My own husband has been fine and we've reached an understanding I never thought possible. He says he has always trusted me and always will. He wants me to pretend gayety for the neighbors' sake; yet I feel I ought to show contrition or they'll think such conduct is usual with me . . .

• • • •

Would I find peace if I told his family the real truth so they won't think I'm a trollop? I could send copies of his letters which in themselves tell a different story than he told. My husband says it is petty of me to have such vindictive ideas; that I shouldn't care what they think or say. But I do care—terribly. Do you think there is peace and respect to be found again, ever? MAGDALEN.

The Real Degradation.

DEAR MAGDALEN: If this is an authentic story—and not a piece of fiction invented to test my reaction—my advice is to thank God for your understanding husband; keep your chin up and make no explanation whatsoever to anybody else. As someone has said: "Never explain. Your friends don't need it and your enemies won't believe it." Knowledge, however painfully acquired, is a valuable and useful asset—and now you know something about the treachery of thrill-seeking men and combustible emotions, which should stand you in stead for a lifetime.

• • • •

If you cannot recapture a sense of clean self-respect under the neighbors' accusing eyes, persuade your husband to move the family to another neighborhood, the farther away the better. By clinging to the thought that morality has to do with the quality or intention of an action, you may be helped to get a saving slant on the situation. Our thoughts and our intentions alone can really degrade us; through misguided action can sometimes destroy. In your case, fortunately, your misguided se-

Summer Wear For Men Now Colorful, Cool

Air Conditioned Materials, Many Shades of Brown Now High Fashion.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

MEN need no longer be envious of the cool summer clothes designed for women. Tailors have gone to bat and designed suits of air-conditioned materials in effective colorings, and with the same cut and tailoring as heavier clothes, so that the male of the species need not swelter in order to look conservative. He can now be cool in modern washable suits, yet dressed in good taste and with proper restraint.

Color to the Fore.

Originally white was the sole color chosen for men's summer suits, but this summer virtually every color of the rainbow, from white to dark brown, is sponsored by men style authorities. More off-white than white is noted on well-dressed men, with shades of blue much in evidence. Maroon and wine and such shades of brown as cinnamon, mocha, rust, Burma and a new rhum tint are gaining popularity as the season advances. For the ultra-conservative there are neutral tones and navy, gray and black.

The biggest news for men's summer suits, for either business or travel, is the new tropical worsted, of a firm but porous weave. Raw silk, cricket cloth, light-weight cottons and linens, Palm Beach fabrics, gabardine and light-weight flannel are other popular materials. Fabrics which are processed to resist wrinkling and with shrinkage outlawed by being sanforized-shrunk, are much to the fore; as they can be relied upon to stay good-looking through innumerable washings throughout the season.

Odd Trousers—Jacket Suit.

For country and resort wear, flannel and light-weight tweeds in high and pastel colors are considered smart—for the odd trouser and jacket costume. For informal dining and dancing, white or black dinner jackets, or the all-white linen or cotton suit, are equally correct. For the more courageous, blue dinner coats are a smart new note—color is gradually gaining a foothold in men's attire for all occasions. Slacks are tops in sports and beach wear; worn with cotton-mesh shirts or gay flannel blazers. The newest slacks are made of sailcloth, although many are also much in evidence in linen, flannel and novelty cottons.

Not only are men taking to cool and sensible clothes for summer, by way of color and air-conditioned materials, but the fabrics themselves have added interest.

Play Benefits For Children Are Outlined

Bulletin Urges Parents to Provide Plenty of Recreation.

ARE YOU GIVING your child every chance to play? If not, says the United States Children's Bureau, you are depriving him not only of sheer fun and pleasure, but of his own way of learning, for he learns to do the ordinary things of life by practicing them in his play: Play, the bureau's experts point out, is the child's way of experimenting, of finding out about everything in the world around him. Play gives opportunities for new experiences and new combinations of past ones, and, as such, is a serious business to the child and should be considered seriously by his parents and planned for accordingly.

In the bureau's publication, "The Child From One to Six," a section is devoted to this business of play. Toys and backyard play apparatus, play pens and sand boxes are discussed and suggestions given. But perhaps even more important are the paragraphs that are intended to impress parents with the importance of play from every point of view, whether the physical and mental health of the child or his relation to the family, to his playmates, and ultimately to society.

Important Factors.

Some of the fundamental lessons of happy living are instilled, the booklet says, when a little child learns to play his part in a game, to wait his turn and to pay a penalty if he plays out of turn. As he grows older and plays more, he will learn more and more how to adjust himself to the demands and ideals of his group as he will later have to adjust himself to the demands and ideals of his community. At the same time he will learn that he himself can set an example which others will follow. Self-reliance, initiative and leadership develop through group play.

Companions of his own age and plenty of space both indoors and out are two of the child's requirements that the bureau emphasizes. Parents of only children are especially reminded that a little child needs to play and develop with other children who are in the same stage of learning as himself, as well as with those who are a little older or a little younger.

Duties Outlined.

It is the parents' duty to provide these companions for the child and to see to it that they are the kind of playfellows who will help teach him fair play, honesty and courage. Parents are cautioned not to interfere with the children's disputes unless it is necessary in order to prevent cruelty or dishonesty.

One of the most important results of play, the booklet points out, is the training of the child's senses and muscles. For instance, when a little girl is jumping rope to the sound of her own singing, or that of her playmates, she is learning to coordinate eyes, ears and muscles. The perfect rhythm involved is itself the result of earlier muscle and sense training and the child who has played with vigor and freedom attains it without conscious effort.

On Egyptian Lines.

Men's Summer Suits—Cool and Practical

White sanforized-shrunk linen fashions the well tailored and cool suit worn by the man above; tie, hat band and shoe trimming are black. It is the ideal answer to summer apparel that is comfortable, conservative and smart. As a clever contrast, the young woman is wearing a black linen frock trimmed with white stitching. Her accessories are white.

Gentle Manners Not Restricted to In-Door Life

MANNERS in public places are very much in evidence in the summer when much of the life of Washington is out of doors.

Many persons who are polite enough in their own homes do not out-of-doors show the courtesy and consideration for others, that marks the well bred man or woman.

Those who have been used to the code of manners which takes as matter of course that a gentleman gives a seat in the street car or bus to women cannot quite get used to the sight of men sitting down and women standing in crowded public conveyances. But even though the man considers he has as much right to a seat for which he has paid as the woman passengers, he should at least remember that it is very bad form to push and shove other passengers, especially women, in order to insure himself a seat.

Motion picture manners are also in evidence at this time of year. Even in air-cooled theaters no one likes to have the person in the next seat usurping any more than the alloted space. It is very rude to spread out the arms or to cross the knees so that one foot is almost in the neighbor's lap as sometimes happens in the motion picture theaters. It is also rude to talk during the picture or the music. Even if the talkers are not interested in what is going on on the screen or on the stage they should remember that most of the other people in the audience who have paid for their right to look and listen are interested.

QUERY. When a man meets a woman acquaintance as she steps off the street car and finds they are both going in the same direction toward their homes should he offer to carry her bundles? Is it necessary for him to walk with her if he wishes to walk along with a group of men friends?

ANSWER. If the man walks with the woman acquaintance, thus acting as her escort he should offer to carry her bundles. It is quite correct for the woman to retain her packages and thank her escort for his kindness in offering to carry them. If the bundles are heavy of course she will relinquish them at once to her escort as it would embarrass him to be walking with a lady carrying heavy or large bundles.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 17.

THE TIME-HONORED formula for our sex, "church, kitchen, children," is taking a frightful beating these days from this new trinity which seems to dominate our horizon: "charm, grace, poise." The underlying thought is, of course, that while all of us may not be able to achieve roaring, screaming beauty, we can at least give the illusion of it by our public bearing and social ease.

ALICE HUGHES

Now comes another smart and pretty girl to teach us how to walk, talk and exude charm from every pore. She's Marcella Johnson, herself a high-powered fashion model, who is just opening a five-week course in these vital matters in Mr. Rockefeller's widely known Center, now the hub of midtown Gotham.

Essentially, Prof. Johnson's stunt is to teach the young idea how to model, but she also welcomes those ladies who wish to know how to enter the drawing room without tripping over a hairpin, how to adorn the face to the best advantage, and the proper manner of choosing and wearing clothes best suited to their various styles of architecture. She even has a lecture, with laboratory work, on the modulation of the voice!

Prof. Johnson's academy is just another manifestation of the phenomenon here. All over town such things are springing up. The astounding rage for modeling as a profession, and the wondrous grace of its best practitioners, are having their full effect on us all. In five years' time American women will be so all-fired charming that it will be almost unbearable, and men will gallop miles and miles to get away from charm, charm, charm!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We waved good-by to gallant Osa Johnson the other day, as she winged off toward Hollywood to finish planning a solo trip to Borneo! Ever since the plane crash which killed her husband and adventurer-partner, Martin, Osa has been around the village getting over a badly broken leg and plotting against the peace and quiet of the wild-life of Borneo. Osa tells me that after so many exploring trips into uncivilized parts she just can't stay put in America—and maybe the new junket will help her forget her great loss. Indomitable woman, this Osa—and looking very pretty, too.

My vote for the biggest workaday thrill here is to see a police radio car, on a rush call, burst through the incredible traffic in the middle of town. Its siren howling, the little car sends lolling taxis and trucks up on the sidewalks and terrified pedestrians up the sides of buildings! A final scream, and it's off and away, while lady window-shoppers drop into a cocktail lounge for some mild restorative, their nerves jumping madly.

Our famous lawyer, Samuel Untermyer, just celebrating his seventy-ninth birthday, reveals to us reporters that he has been paying all his grandchildren $500 a year each not to drink or smoke. He says he thinks it's a good idea and he will fork over to his great-grandchildren, too, when they are old enough, if they shun the giant killer and the filthy weed.

A new and thrilling honor has come to our State capital, the thriving city of Albany. A survey shows that it leads America in the consumption of Liederkranz cheese, doing away with 16½ Liederkranz sandwiches(on rye?) per 100 of population, during the first quarter of 1937. My Albany correspondent says the town is trying to wear its new honor with becoming modesty, but just can't help strutting a teeny bit!

With ladies' legs receiving the horrid prominence that was their lot nearly a decade ago, thanks to the rising hemline, stockings are getting more attention than they have for years. A run used to be merely a run; now it's a major catastrophe. The hosiery makers show me four new colors for fall—burnt sugar, Rio Andes and bush-glo. Holdovers will be Carib, Cafe Clair, Avenue and smokestone. Wish I could show them here in Technicolor, for, after all, these trade names don't mean much unless you see 'em on the hoof!

Learn Music Appreciation

MUSIC hath charms to soothe the savage breast.

So Shakespeare said long before modern nerve specialists proved how right he was. Today hospitals use music to cure nervous ailments.

Radio or phonograph brings this blessed gift to most of us. To enjoy it fully, let's know more of the instruments and the people who bring us beguiling sounds.

Try this experiment. Listen to some good orchestral music. Don't let your knitting or plans for tomorrow's lunch distract you. Relax. Let the music take possession of you. It will arouse your curiosity. Where does that crisp, rattling sound come from, you'll wonder. Probably the snare drum with its catgut cords vibrating against the tight parchment head. That dark and sinister sound? From the French horn, muted. Those warm, wooing tones? From the flute.

June's Jelly Jubilee Starts As Fresh Fruits Fill Markets

Many Berries, Cherries and Melons Now Abound; Task No Longer Cumbersome for Housewife; Bright Jars Add Charm to Kitchen.

By Rebekah Blake.

JELLIES from coast to coast—to say nothing of jams, conserves and marmalades—will come into their own this summer during the celebration of the National Jelly Making Jubilee, from June 15 to July 15.

This event, sponsored by the National Jelly Making Institute, features not only ready-made jelly but jelly made in private kitchens for individual family use.

With a variety of berries and cherries now outstanding values in the markets and watermelons, pineapples, oranges, grapefruit and strawberries still available, this is the jelly and marmalade-making season. Even currants soon will be available, and these should occupy a large share of the homemaker's attention for, of all jellies, the currant is undoubtedly the most popular. Its jewel tones and pleasing tang easily create a piece de resistance for any meal when served as an adjunct to hot breads or as a decorative and flavorsome component of desserts.

Jelly making is not the task it once was. It is no longer necessary to devote a week or even a day to this task, eliminating everything else from your life. It is a simple procedure, nowadays, to cook a small amount of fruit, mix it with sugar and with a jellying agent (if necessary), pour it into clean glasses, let it jell, cover with a layer of melted paraffin and set away on a cupboard shelf for future use. This easy method is even convenient for the apartment dweller who has little kitchen space. With her own jelly on the shelf, she will feel more like the mistress of a real home.

And with homemade jelly to serve at meals, and in-between-meals, you will be that much nearer a perfect hostess. This colorful accessory to a meal will not go unnoticed, and neither will its luscious flavor when it is made just right.

Fancy jars of homemade jam and jelly are handy to have on hand as little impromptu gifts for invalids, guests or unheralded birthdays. They are personal gifts that may be wrapped in fancy papers and ribbons and made ready quickly.

A colorful kitchen isn't an impossibility even if you can't afford to redecorate. Bring your jellies, jams, marmalades and preserves, everything packed in glass, out into the open, and see how quickly a drab kitchen takes on an air of gaiety. Arrange your kitchen so that prosaic-looking objects are kept behind cupboard doors while the open shelves are filled with gleaming glass jars holding bright-colored delicacies.

Here are a few rules for simple jelly making:

1. Be neat.
2. Don't try to hurry.
3. Have all of your equipment where it may be easily found.
4. Use fruit that is in good condition for best results.
5. Don't try to do other things while the jelly is boiling, or it will boil over and cause more work.
6. Be sure the jelly glasses are clean.
7. Don't fill the glasses too full.
8. Implements may be washed more easily soon after use than if they have been left for several hours.

Here is a list of the probable equipment necessary for jelly making and preserving: Large kettle, preferably with rack, for sterilizing containers; large saucepan or kettle for cooking fruit, quart measure, scales, 3 to 4 yards fine cheesecloth, potato masher for crushing fruit, glasses or jars, tongs for handling glasses, small coffee or tea pot for melting paraffin and rubber rings.

These recipes may prove helpful to you in summer jelly and preserve making:

Strawberry and Pineapple Jam.

2 cups diced fresh pineapple (2½ pound pineapple)
3½ cups sugar
2 cups crushed strawberries (about ¾ quart box)
2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Prepare the pineapple as for table use and cut into dice. Wash, drain, hull and crush strawberries. Place the pineapple with 2 cups of the sugar in a saucepan over low heat; stir until the sugar is dissolved. Boil 10 minutes, stirring constantly to prevent scorching. Add the strawberries, lemon juice and the remaining sugar; stir until the sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly for about 30 minutes, or until fairly thick. Pour into hot jars and seal. If scales are available use equal weights of sugar and pineapple and ¾ pound of sugar for each pound of strawberries.

Currant and Raspberry Jam.

2 cups crushed raspberries (about 3 pint boxes)
2 cups crushed currants
3 cups sugar.

Inspect, wash, thoroughly drain and crush the raspberries. Wash the currants, remove from the stems and crush. Put the raspberries, currants and sugar into a saucepan over low heat and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Increase the heat and boil rapidly, stirring constantly until the juice gives the jelly test. Pour into hot jars and seal. If scales are available use ¾ pound of sugar to each pound of fruit.

Currant Jelly.

Pick over and wash 2 quarts currants, mash in enamel saucepan and add 2½ cups cold water. Bring to boiling point and cook 15 minutes. Strain through dampened jelly bag or double cheesecloth. There should be 3 cups. Bring juice to boiling point and add ¾ cup sugar for each cup of juice. Cook to 221 F. on candy thermometer, or until jelly test is reached or mixture sheets from a cold metal spoon dipped into the jelly. Remove from heat, skim if necessary and pour quickly into clean jelly glasses. Cover with melted paraffin. This should make 6 glasses of jelly. For second extraction, cover pulp left in jelly bag with cold water, bring to boiling point stir to prevent burning and boil 10 minutes. Finish like first extraction and repeat for a third extraction. Juice from second and third cookings may be put together before adding sugar.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Foot Care.

CARE OF THE FEET should begin in childhood, and inasmuch as the feet are not completed in their development until the age of 20, it is obvious that faulty care in early life will cause defects that do not show up until the beginning of maturity. The arches of the feet are not wholly formed until the age of 10 years.

Common foot defects in childhood are red spots, blisters, corns and calluses caused by thick, stiff, heavy or outgrown shoes. A survey of the children in public schools by the National Foot Health Council shows that in 1935, 75 per cent were wearing outgrown shoes.

In children certain symptoms manifest themselves fairly early, and the parent and teacher should be informed of these so they may discover them in time:

1. Unwillingness to walk, run or play, in an otherwise normal child, may indicate weakening muscles of the foot and leg, leading to the so-called "fallen arch."

2. Run-over heels, or a tendency to "toe out," or a "bulging" of the ankles on the inner side, is a result of faulty posture and improper shoes, and is a primary cause of weak foot and strained arches.

The feet of school children should be examined at regular intervals so that minor defects, which may become serious, can be corrected before they disable the child physically, or retard the ability to study and keep up with classes and sports.

Prevention means cotton or wool stockings that are big enough, flexible leather-soled shoes, with lightweight calf or kid leather over the toes, so that the feet bend without restriction or chafing. The shoes of the child determine the feet of the adult.

Since very sturdy shoes are made of heavier and stiffer leatners than formerly, foot defects among children have greatly increased. Not only do the heavy stiff leathers overexert delicate muscles and feet, but too many mothers are misled by the ruggedness of sturdy shoes and permit their children to wear them long after they have been outgrown.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS.

C. Z.: "I am 5 feet tall and weigh 140 pounds. Please tell me how much I should weigh."

Answer: Dr. Lulu Hunt Peters used to have a rule, which still holds, that in order to find the ideal weight for an adult, multiply the number of inches over 5 feet by 5½ and add 110. Under those circumstances your ideal weight would be 110.

Editor's Note: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending ten cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. Halibut Is Baked With Cucumbers Flavors Blend Well for Tasty Seasonal Dish.

BAKED FISH takes its cue from cucumbers—and becomes the most captivating entree of the season! Succulent strips of cucumbers and slices of halibut have a special affinity when baked together—the flavors blend exquisitely in the cooking, resulting in a dish that's both unusual and delightful. It's delovely, too—especially with sprigs of crisp parsley and a dash of paprika. You will find baked fish with cucumbers not only a pleasing variation in your Lenten menus, but you will want to serve it many times throughout the year.

Baked Fish With Cucumbers.

2 tbsp. butter
1½ lbs. halibut salt
2-3 cup water
2-3 cup irradiated evaporated milk
2 large cucumbers

Melt butter in baking pan. Set fish in pan, sprinkle with salt, add water and milk. Pare cucumbers. Cut into halves crosswise, then in quarters lenghtwise. Lay around fish. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until fish pulls away from bones, about one hour. Yield: six servings.

Fish, baked in creamy-rich irradiated evaporated milk, acquires both delicacy of flavor and texture, and high nutritive value—abounding in vitamin D, which is so important in winter-time foods.

Notables Attend Concert Of Pan-American Union

Senorita Lucrezia Sarria, Peruvian Diva, Appears as Soloist; Army Band Also Featured in Brilliant Program at Quarters Here.

Concerts at the Pan American Union have made great strides since the first one was broadcast from a modest room at station WRC in 1924. A few concerts later they were transferred to their present attractive setting, but even then were attended by a number of distinguished guests. These al fresco music presentations steadily have climbed in importance, however, and last evening, at the eighty-third concert, there were just about as many important officials and diplomats as it is possible to assemble on a warm summer evening in the Capital.

Uncertain weather made it necessary to hold the concert inside, although as a rule guests sit out in the esplanade under the stars. But the Pan American Union is as interesting inside as out, especially the large patio with its fountain in the middle, ferns and palms at the sides, and South American birds of brilliant plumage.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the union, stood just inside the door last evening to welcome the guests. He wore one of his many decorations and chatted fluently in Spanish with members of the Latin-American corps in Washington.

Senorita Sarria Featured Soloist

The entire staff of the Peruvian Embassy, from the Ambassador to the third secreatry, turned out last evening to hear their countrywoman, dark-eyed, 22-year-old Senorita Lucrezia Sarria, the soloist. She has appeared in many a concert in Chile and Peru, and now is studying in New York for grand opera. Later in the evening, Dr. William Manger, of the staff of the Pan American Union, entertained at a small supper party in her honor. The United States Army Band also was an important feature of the concert.

The Latin-American countries were, as usual, well represented at the event, among those present being the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, the Ecuadorean Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro, the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Busk Codas, Senora de Castro Beeche, wife of the Minister of Costa Rica; the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de Brenes Jarquin, and the Charke d'Affaires of Honduras and Senora de Caceres. Among other members of the Spanish Diplomatic Corps at the concert were Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, and the Charge d'Affaires of Spain, Dr. Enrique Carlos de la Casa.

Noted Persons Present at Event

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson were among the early arrivals, the latter wearing a becoming gown of pink lace. Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, with Jean and Jane, two of their daughters, and Mrs. Arthur Vandenburg, wife of Senator Vandenberg, were other members of the official set present. Mrs. Vandenberg, who came alone, wore blue chiffon.

Other guests included Senator and Mrs. Joseph Robinson, Senator and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Senator and Mrs. James Pope, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Representative Sam Rayburn, Representative and Mrs. Henry Ellenbogen and Representative and Mrs. Lloyd Thurston.

Dinner Is Planned For Miss Jackson

Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan will entertain at a dinner this evening following the wedding rehearsal for the marriage of her sister, Miss Hope Jackson, to Mr. Patrick Garvan, of New York. The ceremony will take place tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at Green Court, the Long Island estate which Mrs. Morgan is occupying for the summer.

Last evening the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, entertained at a large dinner in the Viennese room of the St. Regis in honor of the young couple. His guests included the Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles A. Davila; Mr. and Mrs. James Freeman Curtis, Mrs. Campbell Prichett, Miss Mary Louise Marsh, Mrs. William Kerkam and Mrs. Millard West, all of Washington.

Others present were Mr. Robert Jackson, father of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan, parents of Mr. Garvan; Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Princess Lucigne, Count Mario Zoppola, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Martin and Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Baldwin Perry.

Mrs. Morgan Bradford Returns From Europe

Mrs. Morgan Bradford, who has been traveling in England and on the Continent the past six weeks, returned on the Champlain recently and now is at her home on Park road.

While her plans for the remainder of the summer have not been completed, Mrs. Bradford expects to remain in Washington through June.

Picnic Affair Is Held Indoors

Mrs. Louis Caldwell Forced to Alter Party. Plans.

THE PICNIC INDOORS at Mrs. Louis Caldwell's house yesterday was as informal as it would have been if the weather had co-operated and the luncheon had been served outside under the trees, according to schedule. But although lowering clouds changed the locale of the get-together, that the hostess insisted was "not a party," they did not diminish the gayety of the affair.

Tables for four, covered with brightly colored cloths, were set in the drawing room and in the book-lined library, and guests, plate-in-hand, clustered around each table after they had served themselves at the bountiful buffet spread in the dining room.

"Rain or shine, we're having a picnic anyway," the hostess had previously announced. "Even to paper plates and cups," she added. Even to sliced ham and potato salad, and all the items on picnic fare, plus a number of others—including blackberry pie—that guests never dare to hope for at a picnic, she might have said.

Lively talk, touching on everything from vacation jaunts to whether the newsreel cameras do justice to the Duchess of Windsor, added to the fun and informality of the affair; and, judging from the way guests seemed to relax and enjoy themselves, there was no doubt Irene Caldwell's "picnic inside" was a success from every angle.

Among the guests were Mrs. Marion Robinson, of Chicago, who has been visiting Mrs. Caldwell for the past week and who will return home today; Mrs. Edward B. Wilber, Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce, Mrs. Chester Davis, Mrs. Elliott Thurston, Mrs. George Romney, Mrs. Helen Russell and her sister, Mrs. R. S. Bottorff, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. Walker Buel, Mrs. Charles Daly, jr., Mrs. Warren Wheaton, Mrs. Luther Johnson and Mrs. Royal T. McKenna.

Mrs. J. Fred Essary could not come at the last minute, because her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Tilden Ansell, jr., who was married Saturday, had just returned from her wedding trip. Mrs. McKenna left the picnic party a bit earlier than she might have otherwise, because she was expecting her daughter, Miss Martha McKenna, to return yesterday afternoon from Wellesley College, where she has been studying the past year. Another daughter, Miss Helen McKenna—better known as "Bambi"—returned a few days ago from Vassar.

Hutto-Risdon Wedding Held

Historic Pohick Church in Fairfax County, Va., was the scene yesterday at noon of the marriage of Miss Adelaide Harrison Kirk Risdon, daughter of Mrs. John Underwood Reardon, of Alexandria, to Dr. George Mahlon Hutto, son of Mrs. Omer Davis Hutto and the late Dr. Hutto, of Kokomo, Ind., and Washington. The Rev. Harry Lee Doll, of Christ Episcopal Church of Alexandria, and the Rev. C. A. Langston, of Pohick Church, officiated.

The altar and the deep old-fashioned windows were banked with green. White lilies and white gladioli decorated the chancel.

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. Reardon. Her wedding gown was of white satin, with a redingote buttoned down the front and bordered with Alencon lace. Panels of the lace were inset fanwise at the back of the waist to form a train. Her tulle veil fell from a tulle cap with a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a sheaf of annunciation lilies.

Miss Margaret Thomas Moore, of Alexandria, was the only attendant, and wore a bouffant frock of pale green net and a white hat with a green band. She carried a cluster of white roses and baby's breath. Dr. Frederick George Helwig, of Allentown, Pa., was best man for Dr. Hutto, and the ushers were Dr. Robert F. Golden, of Iowa; Dr. Harold A. Hobart, of Michigan; Dr. William Harry Hutton, of Indianapolis; Dr. Hazen Shea, Dr. John Beverly Smith and Mr. David Rhinehart Stauffer, all of Washington.

There was a small reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reardon in Rosemont for the wedding party and the two families.

Miss Bessie K. Lacy, New Petworth School Principal, Honored at Dinner Given by Residents of Section

P.-T. A. and Civic Groups Join in Tribute to Educator.

Affair at Ingleside Farm Comes as Surprise to Honor Guest.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Residents of the Petworth district—the Woman's Club, Parent-Teacher Association, Citizens Association and the teachers of Petworth School—joined last night in extending a community welcome to Miss Bessie K. Lacy, new principal of the school. They gave a dinner in her honor at Ingleside Farm on the Rockville pike, which was arranged without her knowledge and was a complete surprise to her when she arrived and found the guests assembled.

Miss Anna Halberg, professor of education at Wilson Teachers College, from which Miss Lacy went to Petworth School as principal, took the guest of honor to the scene of the party. She was greeted by Mrs. Ernest K. Allen, president of the P.-T. A.; Mrs. Oscar H. Nelson, president of the Woman's Club; Mr. John H. Cooper, head of the Citizens Association, and more than 50 other guests who had gathered for the occasion.

Arrive in Downpour.

The downpour which came just at the hour of arrival may have dampened a few party frocks, but in no way marred the gayety of the occasion. Guests who did not have their own parasols were escorted from their cars beneath a huge garden umbrella conveyed by a doorman as efficient as Washington's "William." In the dining room, long tables arranged down three sides, and smaller ones in the center, were lighted with small candles branching out like flowers from the bouquets which formed the table centerpieces. There were also tall green candles in candlesticks.

The guest of honor wore a flame-colored gown with rhinestone clips at the neck, and silver accessories. Mrs. Nelson was in a chiffon frock of hyacinth blue and Mrs. Allen wore an ivory brocade with flowers in a soft shade of peach, and had over her shoulders a black lace cape.

Others at Table.

Others at the head table included Dr. Robert H. Haycock, assistant superintendent; Dr. Julia Hahn, supervising principal of the Third Division; Miss Halberg, Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. LaVerne Beale, past president of the Petworth Woman's Club; Mrs. F. L. Goodwin and Mrs. J. E. Davis, past presidents of the Petworth Parent-Teacher Association.

Miss Lacy was presented with a corsage of talisman roses, and, after the dinner, with a hand-painted booklet made by Mrs. Fred Gauff, art chairman of the P.-T. A., assisted by Mrs. Robert McCallum, jr., one of the Petworth teachers, in which all of the guests had written their names.

It was the first time in the history of the Petworth community the three organizations had joined in giving such an affair. Miss Lacy last February took the principalship of the school, which has an enrollment of 535 pupils.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents, 5510 Second street, followed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace over satin with a lace train and buttons down the front to the waistline. The gown had a Peter Pan collar and with it she wore a long tulle veil held in place by a cap of seed pearls. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. J. F. Burke served as matron of honor, wearing a frock of blue chiffon and a maline picture hat of the same shade. She carried talisman roses and baby's breath. Miss Betty Law and Miss Lucile Hessick were bridesmaids, and the flower girls were the Misses Marian King and Lidwine Philips. The two latter wore frocks of green net and carried nosegays of yellow daisies, and the bridesmaids wore yellow and pink chiffon gowns trimmed with orchid and doubonnet ribbon.

There was, of course, a birthday cake with one candle, which was blown out by the president.

The program was short, with only one speech, and that by Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, of Washington, who told of the forming of a Venture Club, a junior group sponsored by the Soroptimists.

In addition to the members of the Washington Club, several city officials of Alexandria, Miss Corinne Reardon, president of the Business and Professional Club there, and representatives from the Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions clubs were guests.

Mrs. Bowman was an active member of the B. and P. W. Club until she took the presidency of the Soroptimist Club, and also has been prominent in the Virginia Graduate Nurses Association and is a former president of the Alexandria Hospital Alumnae Association.

They include, besides the president, Miss Barbara Watkins, vice president; Miss Eleanor Nugent, treasurer; Mrs. Hazel Van Middlesworth, recording secretary; Miss Lillian Woodley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Christine West Heritage, Mrs. Lily Cunningham and Miss Marie Greene, members of the board of directors.

Other charter members are Mrs. Martha Neale, Mrs. Margaret Stockbridge, Mrs. Vertie Williams, Miss Frances Smith, Mrs. Mary Teresi, Miss Florence Long, Mrs. Aleene Guthrie, Mrs. Jeanette Michelbach Berman, Mrs. Pauline Gorham.

Four new members were added to the roll last night: Miss Rietta Butler, Mrs. William K. Coakley, Mrs. M. H. Burchell and Mrs. Manola Brennan.

Special Parley Called to Consider Closed Shop Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 17.—The presidents of ten large associations of newspaper editors and publishers issued a call today for a special convention June 29 to discuss the demands of the American Newspaper Guild for a closed shop.

The call was issued by A. H. Kirchhofer, of the American Society of Newspaper Editors; S. R. Winch, of the Pacific Northwest Publishers Association; Edward F. Jewell, of the New England Daily Newspaper Association; E. D. Corson, of the New York State Publishers Association; R. R. O'Brien, of the Inland Daily Press Association; George F. Morrell, of the California Newspaper Publishers Association; Floyd Chalfant, of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Association; Louis N. Goldberg, of the Texas Newspaper Publishers Association; Ted Dealey, of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, and James G. Stahlman, of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

"To the daily newspaper publishers and editors represented in the membership of the undersigned organizations.

"The American Newspaper Guild, at its annual convention in St. Louis, voted overwhelmingly to leave the ranks of the American Federation of Labor and to affiliate with the C. I. O. In addition, the guild is demanding closed-shop contracts, not only with the daily newspapers of this country, but with the three great press associations.

"The issue is whether or not the newspapers of this country should submit to the guild's demand for a closed shop.

"This is a most serious threat to a free press, and consequently to the liberties of a free people. Many publishers throughout the country have already expressed the feeling that the newspapers should stand together against his common danger.

G-Men Accuse 60 in Alleged Gas Tax Fraud

Charge Tennessee Was Defrauded of Levy During 1936.

Complaints were filed yesterday by special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation before the United States Commissioner at Shreveport, La., charging 60 persons and firms with defrauding Tennessee out of the State gasoline tax during 1936.

Investigation disclosed that approximately 230 tank cars of gasoline had been shipped in interstate commerce from Shreveport to various points in Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida. Such shipments were misbilled as kerosene, refined oil or distillate, which is a violation of the Federal statute regarding the misbilling of shipments moving in interstate commerce, it is charged.

The defendants also are liable to prosecution under two other Federal statutes. One makes it unlawful to ship explosives in interstate commerce without the proper markings on the tank cars; the other prohibits shipment in interstate commerce of any article billed as another where the freight rate on the article billed is lower than the rate on the actual commodity shipped.

Those charged, either as principals or conspirators, are residents of Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama and Florida. Several are being named in two or more complaints.

Investigations have also been conducted by Tennessee and Mississippi for the purpose of collecting the gasoline tax on the shipments that had been made under those false bills of lading.

Committees Seek To Restrict Blum

Paris, June 17 (AP).—Committees in both the Senate and Chamber of Deputies attempted tonight to restrict the financial decree powers demanded by the government of Premier Leon Blum.

The Senate Finance Committee tentatively refused to approve a bill for full decree powers, which would give the People's Front government virtual financial dictatorship to meet an expected deficit of $1,760,000,000 in regular and extraordinary expenditures for the year.

The chamber tariff committee simultaneously tacked a rider on another bill which would deny the government power to restrict operations in gold or foreign exchange.

Five hundred anti-Fascists, most of them shouting and waving placards, met the train. A special police escort protected the Ambassador and his wife as they hurried away in a police automobile.

Both Parties Remarry; Find Divorce Is False

Chicago, June 17 (AP).—Reports that Jean and Finis Bennett were divorced seem to have been greatly exaggerated.

Finis gave this account of the misunderstanding in superior court today: Friends had told him his estranged wife, Jean, had obtained a decree. Friends told Jean that Finis had procured one. So both married again. Then they learned the information was false. Finis instituted belated divorce proceedings today so both parties to the suit could remarry their current mates.

This Morning

Huffman's Career Real Story Book Tale.

By Shirley Povich.

When 2,000 folks from Virginia's Shenandoah Valley gather at Griffith Stadium on Sunday to pay honor to Benjamin Franklin Huffman, of the St. Louis Browns, it will be with pardonable pride.

POVICH.

Because Benny Huffman is not only a native son, but his has been a story-book leap into big league fame—an almost incredible success tale that surely must have captured the imagination of even the most lukewarm baseball fan down there in the Valley.

The idea of honoring Huffman, conceived by The Washington Post and rapidly adopted by civic organizations, businessmen and other folks from Huffman's part of the country, was given added impetus the other day when the youth stepped to the bat with the bases full in St. Louis and pounded out a two-bagger that beat the Washington Club.

• • • •

When young Huffman steps up there at the plate on Sunday to be presented with the gift purchased for him by his Virginia admirers, the 2,000 Valley fans and the other thousands in the park will be gazing upon a lad whose achievements have already exceeded his wildest dreams.

• • • •

Benny Huffman is a regular catcher with the Browns only six months after he decided to cast his lot with professional baseball—if professional baseball would have him—and the odds that it would were heavily against him.

He had been only a fair college ball player down there at Bridgewater College and during the summer months he was able to pick up some small coin with the semipro teams around Harrisonburg. There never was much of an idea that he was major league timber and Benny himself never gave that much thought.

He was prepared to return to Bridgewater College last fall as captain-elect of the baseball team when one of those periodical athletic policy reforms struck the Nation's colleges. Bridgewater officials decided to be very straight-laced in the matter of subsidizing its athletes. Away from Benny they took the athletic scholarship that covered the cost of his tuition, and under those circumstances Benny couldn't continue in college.

• • • •

So he picked up his belongings, borrowed 50 bucks and enrolled at one of those new-fangled baseball schools which advertise well but rarely graduate a youth into a steady baseball job. But Benny would have a fling at it anyway. Maybe in his case the miracle would happen and he would get some kind of a minor league job.

The miracle that did happen must surely have flabbergasted the boy. Rogers Hornsby who, for a consideration, lent his name to the faculty list of the baseball school, took a fancy to the raw kid from Virginia and took him South as the Browns' batting practice catcher.

That in itself was an achievement, but apparently Benny was made of something better than batting practice stuff, because his name began to creep into the Browns' regular line-up down there in the Southern exhibition games, and when the squad's young hopefuls were gradually given their releases the name of Benny Huffman remained on the Browns' roster.

• • • •

The boy who had gone South as the ugly duckling of the club, went back to St. Louis with them as a sensational catching prospect. Hornsby liked that incessant chatter he set up behind the bat. He liked Benny's throwing arm and he liked the way Benny stood up there at bat.

• • • •

There were a few features of his catching to be ironed out, but Hornsby was tolerant. And his tolerance was rewarded, apparently. For even with such a talented catcher as Ray Hemslie at his command, Hornsby found himself using young Huffman with more and more frequency. The lad was beginning to blossom. And against right-handed pitching, it was usually Benny, not Hemslie, who was behind the bat for the Browns.

Rare is the fellow who can make that long jump from the small college diamond to the big leagues in the space of one season. Eddie Collins did it and so did Frankie Frisch and the Sewell boys from Alabama and Johnny Broaca, of Yale. But the rest you can count on the fingers of your other hand.

And so it is that the valley fans are proud of Benny. In the year when the lack of good young catchers had set virtually every big league manager to gnashing his teeth, little Benny turns up as one of the prize rookies of the season. Benny is not very big, you know.

But somewhere beneath the letters of that St. Louis uniform beats a ticker that apparently is plenty big and plenty stout. And down there in the valley, that's one of the things they like about Benny Huffman.

Raymond Nine Wins.

Track Stars Open National Meeting Today

Nation's Fastest Runners Compete in Coast Track Event.

Berkeley, Calif., June 17 (AP).—Champions and near-greats of college track and field open a two-day assault on time and distance here tomorrow in one of the biggest athletic carnivals of the year, the annual N. C. A. A. meet.

It's a big show from start to finish. The 100-yard dash alone has 43 entries, the fastest collegians in the land. One or more athletes from almost every State in the Union will dig spikes into the cinders or turf of the "million dollar" University of California layout.

Nearly 300 performers will represent 66 major colleges and universities. A few noted absentees include Alton Terry, of Hardin-Simmons, javelin thrower, and Don Lash, Indiana's great distance runner.

Lash competes at Princeton Saturday. His absence is expected to cost Indiana the team championship as he had been a prime favorite to win the mile and two-mile runs.

With Lash out of competition, form-chart statisticians installed University of Southern California the favorite to retain the team title, largely through the activities of her famous pole vaulters, Bill Sefton and Earle Meadows.

Stanford, entering the largest team of 21 men, figures to press Southern California, with Indiana rating third choice and Michigan, Washington State, Notre Dame, Ohio State, Temple, Pittsburgh, and Columbia trailing in that order.

Sefton and Meadows are co-holders of the unofficial world record at 14 feet 11 inches. Their main outside competition will come from the world record holder, George Varoff, of Oregon, who did 14 feet 6½ inches last year and then failed to make the Olympic team.

Barney Ross Wins Over Chuck Woods

Indianapolis, June 17 (AP).—Barney Ross, of Chicago, world's welterweight champion, slugged his way to a 4-round nontitle knockout victory over Chuck Woods, of Detroit, before 6,000 fans here tonight in the American Association baseball park. Ross weighed 143 and Woods 148.

London, June 17 (AP).—Lady Zia Wernher's Precipitation, the 2-to-1 favorite, won the historic Ascot Gold Cup today, covering the 2½ miles in near record time.

Ridden by Pat Beasley, Precipitation defeated Sir Abe Bailey's Cecil by 2 lengths and Lord Stanley's gallant little filly, Quashed, by 6 in 4 minutes, 18 4-5 seconds, 2 1-5 seconds slower than the Gold Cup record of 4:16 3-5 set by Golden Myth in 1922. Quashed defeated William Woodward's thoroughbred, Omaha, by a nose in this classic last year in 4:33 3-5.

New Yorkers Stretch Lead 2½ Games

Six Pitchers in Action, 25 Safe Blows Hit During 'Riot.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 17.—Pitchers came a dime a dozen at Yankee Stadium today as the world champion Yankees outslugged and outlasted the Cleveland Indians to sweep the three-game series with a final 9-to-7 victory.

Altogether, five home runs were hit, six pitchers saw service and 25 safe blows were collected before the Yanks finished on top to stretch their American League lead to 2½ games.

The Yanks had to come from behind twice, with a three-run splurge in the second inning and a five-run barrage in the seventh before they won out. Each time a homer set the pace for the scoring attack.

Hadley Wins Fourth.

Bump Hadley started for the New Yorkers and drew credit for his fourth win of the year, although Johnny Murphy took over the job in the eighth. Earl Whitehill, Cleveland starter, got as far as the beginning of the Yanks' big seventh inning and was followed in quick order by Joe Heving, Ivy Paul Andrews and Johnny Wyatt, with Heving the loser.

Homers were contributed by Bill Dickey, George Selkirk and Frank Crosetti on the Yanks' behalf, and Hal Trosky and Earl Averill for the Tribe. Selkirk and Trosky each had three singles in addition to their round-trippers.

Averill Gets Homer.

The Tribe got away in front with a run in the first on Averill's homer, but the Yanks took the lead in the second on Lou Gehrig's single, Dickey's homer, hits by Jake Powell and Selkirk and Tony Lazzeri's grounder to third.

By adding a run in the third, with Trosky driving it in, and two more in the fourth, the Indians regained the lead until the Yanks tied it up with Selkirk's eleventh homer of the season in the sixth.

Chicago, June 18.—The fourth annual American Association all-star game will be played either Tuesday, July 27, or July 28, depending on the location of the game, association officials decided today.

'Atlanta Atom' May Be Lost to U. S. Team

Bitsy Grant, the Georgia netter who tried for many years to make the American Davis Cup team, may not be able to play at Wimbledon and may be lost to the team for good because of a shoulder injury, reports from London said today.

U. S. Davis Cup Team May Lose Bitsy Grant

By the Associated Press.

London, June 17.—America qualified two men for the semifinals of the Queens Club Tennis Tournament today and lost the services, temporarily, of the "Atlanta Atom," Bryan Grant.

While Don Budge and Wayne Sabin were moving into the last four along with England's Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, Grant was forced to quit after his two sets of his match with Fumiteru Nakano, of Japan, because of a lame shoulder. Walter L. Pate, nonplaying captain of the American Davis Cup team, hurried Grant off to a physician for treatment.

The doctor's examination did not disclose the exact nature of Bitsy's ailment except that it is a congestion apparently of an inflammatory nature and not a muscular strain. Grant was put to bed and heat applications were ordered.

The physician will make another examination tomorrow. Grant was described as "quite comfortable" tonight.

"I'm very hopeful he'll be able to play at Wimbledon," said Pate. "But I'm not at all sure."

Grant told the Associated Press he had developed a heavy cold after helping the American team eliminate Australia in cup competition at Forest Hills. He was sick when the team sailed from New York.

"I guess it's the influenza," he said. "I thought I was about well yesterday, but, the sudden cold weather today got me."

Although the Atlantan is convinced he will shake off his illness in time to be in top condition for the second week of the All-England Championships, which open at Wimbledon next Monday, there was speculation over what course Pate would pursue in the event Grant failed to recover fully before the American Cup team faces either Germany or Czechoslovakia in the interzone finals at Wimbledon July 17, 19, 20.

Many critics believe that Sabin will get the call as America's second singles player, with Budge holding down the first-string assignment and teaming up with Gene Mako in doubles.

In the Queen's Club quarter-finals today Sabin outlasted Max Ellmer, top-ranking Swiss, 6—4, 6—8, 6—3. He will face Austin in the semifinals tomorrow. The British stylist eliminated Hal Surface, of Kansas City, 6—3, 6—0.

Budge, favored to battle Austin in the finals, steamrollered Eric Peters, England's seventh ranking player, into submission, 6—2, 6—1. The Californian's opponent tomorrow will be Nakano, who won the opening set of his abbreviated match with Grant, 8—6, and dropped the second, 6—4.

Mrs. L. Pray Bows 3 and 2 To Par Golf

Miss Elizabeth Houghton Is Loser by Same Score.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Defending champion Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley and Challenger Helen Dettweiler will renew their three-year golfing feud in the finals of the District amateur at Chevy Chase this morning, with Mrs. Meckley protecting her untarnished record in the series of matches.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Manor, and the last remaining host club hope, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, were the stepping stones used by the top-notch linkswomen to reach the final round, both bowing by 3 and 2 counts to sub 80 golf on the part of the victors.

The final round participants were both playing fine golf yesterday, Mrs. Meckley needing par in for a 79 at the conclusion of her match while Miss Dettweiler needed a pair of 4's for a 78, despite playing five holes in the rain and the entire matches over a soggy course.

It was the second meeting within the past six days for Misses Dettweiler and Houghton, as the Congressional Miss won the Maryland State title last Saturday over Miss Houghton at Five Farms.

Halve 10 in Row.

It was anybody's match for the first 11 holes, for after the eventual winner won the first hole, they halved 10 in a row with a variety of pars and bogeys. A par 4 netted Helen a 2 up lead on the twelfth hole and she climaxed the match on the short thirteenth by chipping into the hole from 40 feet for a birdie and 3 up lead.

Miss Houghton put a temporary stop to her junior opponent's victory streak by winning the fourteenth with a par 4 and halving the next, but an approach shot within inches of the cup on the sixteenth netted the girl star a final round berth, 3 and 2.

The Meckley-Pray match was featured by a trio of 2's on the short holes, the champion holing 10 and 3 foot putts on the tenth and thirteenth holes of the back nine while Mrs. Pray scored hers on the par 3 fourth hole.

A 41 going out netted the Indian Spring star a 2 up lead at the turn and the duces aided in building it to dormie 5, when Mrs. Pray won two holes with pars before succumbing on the sixteenth green to a halve in 5's.

"Natural Today."

The tournament, which has been a virtual parade of the favorites each day, will have for its final round a "natural." On the basis of her play in the State and decisive victories over Medalist Mrs. Bishop Hill, and Miss Houghton, Helen Dettwiler may be ranked as today's choice, but the apparent jinx that Mrs. Meckley exercises over her opponent cannot be taken lightly.

Mrs. Meckley turned in the most decisive win of the event, over Mrs. W. R. Stokes on Wednesday, in her most impressive performance and followed with yesterday's win over Mrs. Pray.

Easy Win Recorded By Invader

Other Quarter-Finalists Fail to Complete Matches.

By Bob Garrison.

Playing with his right knee in a brace and his game in tune, Frankie Goeltz, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., stroked his way into the semi-final round of the Grand National Tennis Tournament yesterday afternoon with a straight set victory over Tom Mangan, District court veteran, on the Edgemoor courts.

None of the other three matches scheduled in the men's tournament quarter-finals was completed. All women's matches scheduled for Columbia Country Club were postponed due to wet courts, their pairings, listed for yesterday, to be carried over to this afternon.

Seeded No. 1 among the out-of-town entrants, Goeltz hobbled through two 6—3 sets to advance into the round of four at the expense of the 43-year-old campaigner whose drives lacked their usual skid on the synthetic-grass courts.

Goeltz's backhand was too consistent and his placements too sharp to be combatted as he took the first four games in the first set. Trailing love-4, Mangan rallied, however, took his own service, broke Goeltz's, and again held his own to advance to 3—4 in games, but Goeltz regained his poise and ran out the set, taking the next two games, dropping only two points.

The second set was a repetition of the opener Goeltz grabbing the first game, and, after losing a long deuce game, taking the next three to lead, 4—1. Mangan held his service the next two times and the invader went out on his own service in the ninth game, to win, 6—3.

Tony Latona, making seemingly impossible gets, rallied late in the second set to catch his opponent, Dooly Mitchell, seeded No. 1, and eventually win, 7—5. When it appeared he had Mitchell on the run, darkness forced posponement, with the score standing one set each. Mitchell swept through the first set, 7—2. By agreement, the entire match will be replayed from the beginning.

What appears to be the show's biggest upset was cut short by darkness. Harry Heffner, national ranking junior star, took everything that Yelverton Garnett could stroke his way and returned them profitting in on the lanky No. 2 seeded player's errors, to win the first set, 6—3, before the match was discontinued.

Heffner, 18 years old and fast, cashed in on a rapid service and baseline attack. Garnett appeared to possess little of the skill that earned him his ranking, in dropping the set to the newcomer to District court wars.

The match between Billy Contreras and Hugh Lynch was not played. Both players were on hand but failed to get started before the skies darkened. Their match will be played Monday. The Mitchell-Latona and the Heffner-Garnett matches will be played Sunday morning on the Edgemoor Courts.

Hotchkiss Stars

DOOLEY MITCHELL.

YELVERTON GARNETT.

Hotchkiss Cup Matches Are Slated Today

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 17.—Richmond netmen prepared for invading Washington and Baltimore teams on the eve of the seventeenth annual Hotchkiss Cup tennis matches.

Cliff Miller, Richmond City champion, will lead the local team which will seek to regain the trophy it last won in 1933. Bob Cabell, Jack Lewis, Frank Williams, Fred Valentine and J. B. Graham compose the Richmond team.

Opening matches will be played tomorrow, with the finals scheduled for Saturday. E. C. Hotchkiss, Richmond sportsman, donor of the cup after which the series is named, will present the trophy to the winning team at the close of the matches Saturday.

The Norfolk team, led by Teddy Penzold, president of the Middle Atlantic Lawn Tennis Association, will consist of Sidney Hughes, Freddy Perkins, Jim Peake, Bob Butler, Dave Jordan, Jack Mallory and Dickie Spindle.

The Washington team, which will defend the cup it has won for the past two years, will be composed of Dooley Mitchell, Yelverton Garnett, Hugh Lynch, Tony Latona, Harry Heffner and Clarence Charest.

Clubs Unable To Buy Stars, Says Griffith

Cites Fact That Richer Teams Than Nats Lack Pitchers.

With a loud "humph" that bordered on a snort, Clark Griffith tossed into the waste basket a fan letter that had been occupying his attention yesterday and then made himself clear.

"Here's a fellow who writes in that the Washington team isn't winning because I don't buy some good pitchers," said the 67-year-old owner of the Nats. "That just goes to show what I get blamed for.

"He must think buying a good pitcher is just a case of spending the money. But that's one thing money won't buy these days—a good pitcher. They're too much in demand. Other teams won't sell.

"Why, it's silly to blame me. There are five other club owners in the league who could regard my wealth as tip money, but they can't buy pitchers, either. Look at Tom Yawkey up there is Boston. How many millions does he have—40? And the Red Sox have been needing pitchers for three years.

"If fellows like Yawkey and Ruppert and Comiskey and Bradley can't buy pitchers, what chance do we have?

"The best minor leaguers are a gamble and we've got to depend on developing young fellows. Luck plays a big part in that, and so far we haven't ha much luck. Some of those other clubs have. That young fellow Poffenberger that Detroit came up with the other day looks like he'll do real well, and a team that gets a-hold of a kid like that should thank its stars."

Rained out of their final battle with the Tigers yesterday, the Nats will encounter the St. Louis Browns today in the first of a three-game series. It is a Ladies' Day game, with women fans the guests of the management.

Jimmy DeShong, who was aching for another chance at the Tigers after being driven out of the box in the second inning on Tuesday, was to have pitched yesterday. He will get the opening assignment today.

Young Julio Bonetti, the reformed batting practice pitcher who in his first big league start held the Nats to six hits and beat 'em, is expected to go to the mound for the Browns.

The St. Louis Club has been hitting a rapid pace of late for an eighth-place team. The Browns have won 7 of their last 12 games and actually lead the American League in team batting. Hugely responsible for that has been big Beau Bell, who now ranks second among the league's hitters with an average of .380.

Washington fans would have seen Cliff Bolton behind the bat in a Detroit uniform yesterday had the game been played. Young George Tebbetts, the only other able-bodied catcher with the Tigers, strained his back during yesterday's 12-inning affair and Bolton, though not yet completely fit, was scheduled to catch.

With the trading limit passed, the Nats have turned their attention to the waiver lists and the minor leagues in an attempt to bolster the pitching staff. Several deals are pending for a high-ranking minor league hurler and Griffith hopes to complete one within a week.

Babe Didrikson Loses in Women's Western Open; Helen Hicks Wins

'Babe' Is Ousted From Western Tourney on Nineteenth Hole.

Chicago, June 17 (AP).—Helen Hicks did her part again today, but Dorothy Foster, 23-year-old music teacher from Springfield, Ill., wrecked prospects for all "business woman" final in the Western Women's Open tournament by conquering Babe Didrickson in a 19-hole struggle at the Beverly Country Club.

Miss Hicks kept the "business women" final idea alive by trouncing Paula Parker, 19-year-old Milwaukee beauty, 6 and 5. The route, and Miss Foster however, were too much for the Texas Babe.

Miss Didrickson finished the first half of the journey 1 up on Miss Foster. The Babe's margin disappeared when she took a 1 over par 4 on the tenth.

She had a chance to go ahead again when she laid Miss Foster a full stymie in missing a 10 foot putt which would have meant a birdie on the 15th. Faced with the prospect of losing the hole and her advantage with it, the red-haired Springfield miss took her niblick and chipped her ball over Miss Didrickson's into the cup from about a foot away.

Babe squared it with a birdie on the sixteenth, but lost another chance of winning in regulation holes, by finding a trap on the eighteenth, after Miss Foster had been in all kinds of trouble, finally settling for a half in bogey sevens.

Miss Hicks will meet Miss Betty Botterill, the comeback artist from Salt Lake City, in the top-bracket semifinal, and Miss Foster faces Beatrice Barrett, tall Minneapolis star.

Miss Botterill, who came back to defeat Goldie Bateson, of Milwaukee, 1 up in 21 holes after being 5 down at the ninth yesterday, eliminated Mrs. Russell Mann, of Milwaukee, 3 and 2. They were square through the twelfth, but the Far Western player drilled in a 10-foot putt for a birdie on the thirteenth, holed a 50-foot chip shot for another birdie on the fourteenth, and won with a par 5 on the sixteenth.

Miss Barrett was out in front all the way, in eliminating Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Chicago, 2 and 1. She went 3 up by winning the first three holes, and closed the match with a par 3 on the seventeenth.

Miss Hicks made short work of Miss Parker, shooting the first nine holes in 41, 2 over par, to go 6 up. She dropped the tenth, but played the next three in par figures, winning the thirteenth and the match with a 5 to Miss Parker's 6.

Bobby Pacho Winner In Fight With Saban

New York, June 17 (AP).—Bobby Pacho, Los Angeles welterweight, rallied in the last five rounds to punch out a decision over Baby Salvy Saban, of New York, before a crowd of 10,920 fans in Madison Square Garden tonight.

Pacho fired away at long range at Saban's face, and when the fight ended the New Yorker was bleeding from the nose and cuts on both cheeks. Pacho weighed 147½, Saban 148½.

Ring Solons Ban Miller For 'Diving'

Seminole Indian Boxer Out for Life for Richmond Bout.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 17.—The Virginia Boxing and Wrestling Commission today suspended Chief Baby Miller, Seminole Indian fighter, for life after investigating his one-round knockout at the hands of Tommy Spiegal, Uniontown, Pa., boxer, here last night.

The Commission also ordered the $500 purse for the so-called feature bout, which disappointed approximately 8,000 spectators be forfeited and turned over to the State literary fund. A total of 6,847 fight fans had paid $10,655 to see the bouts.

Miller, "the Elf of the Everglades," pleaded that he was sick when he entered the ring to go down in a minute and 37 seconds. Commissioner James Blake said Dr. Lawrence B. Kelleher, examining physician, did not uphold his plea.

The doctor said the Florida Indian's temperature was normal at 2:30 p. m. yesterday, although it was a fraction of a point over normal at fight time.

"I do not think," Dr. Kelleher said, "that his temperature was enough to warrant his refusal to fight. The excitement of the impending battle could cause a slight rise in temperature such as his."

Miller was suspended once before after a kicking episode with "Stumpy" Jacobs, of Hopewell, Va., but was reinstated on six months' probation on January 15. Blake said forfeiture of the purse was mandatory under a second offense.

The edict will hold good in all States affiliated with the National Boxing Association, but the suspension will not affect Miller's scheduled bout in Wheeling, W. Va., June 21, since that contract was signed before the suspension went into effect.

Favorites Advance In Net Tournament

With one exception, favorites passed through first-round matches in the District Junior and Boys' tennis tournament yesterday on the Sixteenth Street Reservoir courts.

Dewitt Smith, seeded No. 5 in the junior rankings, was defeated in a lengthy two-set match, 6—2, 9—7, by Ken Dalby, an unknown. Dalby flashed a powerful forehand drive to build up a first set lead that was not overcome. He eeked out a second set victory after trailing, 6—2.

The committee announced last night that all matches not played yesterday, due to the weather, will not be considered as defaults, but will be played today. Contestants are asked to appear according to the listings below for their postponed matches.

AN OLD SCOTCH STORY

Flowing from Mt. Clach-a-Cheannaiche to Moray Firth, the River Spey passes Cluny Castle, Craig Dhu, the pine forests of Rothiemurchus and Ballindalloch. It also runs by the Glen Spey Distillery in the Glenlivet section of the Scottish Highlands. From this historic river comes the name Spey Royal... and from this distillery—owned by W. & A. Gilbey, Ltd.—comes the good Scotch Whisky that bears this famous name.

'Admiral' to Rest Until Saratoga

New York, June 17 (AP).—War Admiral, Samuel Riddle's Derby, Preakness and Belmont winner, definitely will not return to competition until the Saratoga meeting in August, Trainer George Conway revealed today.

"War Admiral is coming along nicely," he said, "but I am making no attempt to put him under saddle. There is a chance he will be ready to race the latter part of the Saratoga meeting."

LANDSMAN ran MAZYNIATA into defeat, opened a good lead and responded to drive to hold WISE REVUE safe. The latter saved ground throughout and showed a good effort under strong handling. MAZYNIATA was hard used in early running and weakened. DASH IN made up some ground after swinging wide at final bend. LADY GLASGOW was listlessly handled.

Chisox Bow To Red Sox In 2 Games

Wilson Allows Only 5 Hits as Opener Is Won by 5 to 2.

Boston, June 17 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox swept the four-game series with the Chisox today by taking both ends of the Bunker Hill Day doubleheader, 5-2 and 3-2 in 10 innings.

Righthander Jack Wilson allowed only 5 hits in the first game, when he gained his fourth win in 6 starts. The overtime double of Doc Cramer and Ben Chapman's single decided the second contest in Boston's favor.

McNair Hits Homer.

Wilson issued 9 passes as his teammates belted Bill Dietrich for 9 bingles, including Eric McNair's homer with none on in the eighth, but he tightened up in the pinches and forced 10 of the enemy to die on the sacks. Wilson helped his own cause by driving out a double and a single to drive in two runs.

The home forces gave Rube Walberg a 1-run lead in the third inning of the second game but the Chisox wiped it out by scoring both of their runs in the fourth. The game was tied up in the sixth, when Cramer, Cronin and Foxx singled.

Dykes, Walker Ejected.

In the Chicago side of the extra inning, Mike Kreevich drove to center and tried to stretch the hit into a double when he saw Cramer juggle the ball. Cramer threw to Eric McNair and when Kreevich was declared out, Manager Jimmy Dykes and Dixie Walker protested with such vigor that they were ejected from the playing field.

There were two out when Cramer doubled off the left-center wall and raced home with the winning run when Chapman collected Boston's tenth hit off Monty Stratton.

Wilmington, Del., June 17 (U.P.).—Richard Bennett, retiring captain of the University of California tennis team, and Robert Kamrath, University of Texas, reached the semifinal round of the men's singles today in the twenty-ninth annual Delaware State grass court championships.

Bennett, California State titleholder, defeated Lindsay Franklin, of Texas, 6—1, 5—7, 6—2 and Kamrath scored a 1—6 6—2 6—4 victory over Gerard Podesta of Princeton University, formerly of North Carolina. The two other matches of the quarter-finals were postponed until tomorrow because of rain.

The week-end demand for fishing boats is on in earnest and will continue to get greater as the season gets into its stride. To be sure of getting one on Saturdays or Sundays it is necessary to make your reservations ahead.

ACKERMAN

There is no doubt that these are the two days that most anglers have free, but those that have a choice and can go in the middle of the week—will find little traffic on the roads, less congestion at the embarking points, in fact, far more enjoyment all around. Not only that, but you will in many cases meet boat captains glad to see you and eager to give you the best they have, for there are many boats tied to the dock, waiting only for the week-end rush or a stray mid-week party.

Because there has been considerable query lately relative to the status of the fall fish in Maryland, Talbot Denmead, U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, thinks that there might be many more who would like to know how Maryland rates this interesting and valuable fish.

It is the largest member of the minnow family—Cyprinidan, found almost everywhere east of the Alleghanies and is taken on both bait and fly in the clear, swift streams below dams or falls. Ordinarily they do not exceed 12 or 15 inches, but some 18 inches long are occasionally caught.

In this State there is a closed season on the fall fish. Section 1 of Article 39 under "definition" states: "The term game and fresh-water fish includes all fishes found in all waters above a point where the tide ebbs and flows." Section 71 provides the open season for fish above tidewater and an open season on all other species of game or fresh-water fish. The fall fish does not belong to the sucker family (Catostomidae), on which there is provided a season, February 1 to November 30. The open season in Maryland, therefore, is July 1 to November 30 on fall fish.

It is understood that there is no closed season on the fall fish in Virginia, unless it is in waters where no fishing is allowed at all. In Pennsylvania there is no closed season at all, but it is classed as a game fish and a daily bag limit of 25 provided by the law.

New Jersey's bass fishing season, which opened on Tuesday, is going to be one of the most productive anglers of that section have ever had, if it is possible to use as a criterion for a whole season the catches of the first day.

Trout fishermen can still continue with the best fishing they have enjoyed for many, many years. Waters able to support this fish will be restocked as needed right up until the season closes on July 15.

Public waters throughout the State have been stocked with small-mouth and large-mouth or Oswego bass, and in certain sections Rock bass, Calico bass, crappie and bluegills, where they have great popularity as pan fish.

The season in inland waters does not close until November 30. Note bag and size limits. Both large and small mouth must be over nine inches. All others, six inches. Black bass, ten in one day; all others, 20.

For some reason, the bluegs stopped biting early this week along the lower Virginia shore. True, that from Windmill Light (Irvington) up to Smiths Point they had never started, but below that catches had been averaging about 30 to the boat. Fine fish, from 5 to 10 pounds.

If you are going to try it over the week-end, it is very advisable to call ahead, so that you won't take that long 175-mile trip for nothing. Best places have been Buckroe Beach, Messick and Old Point, where captains have been meeting the steamer and taking parties directly to the closeby fishing grounds.

For Messick, call Capt. Floyd Rollins. Yorktown, Capt. E. A. White, Lee Hall 157. Reedsville, Capt. C. L. Parsons, 182. Gloucester Point, Capt. T. S. Clopton, 97-F-5.

The Middles have the edge for the largest hardheads, with the possible chance of a few blues. Solomons, generally one of our best fishing ports, has been enigma this year. Good one day and a flop the next—as last Sunday turned out. Catches of hardheads are good at Herring Bay and Shadyside, but still on the small side.

The one best bet seems to be that shoal of large rock off Piney Point that are rising on occasion. If you are there when they do, there is a chance of as fine sport as you are likely to have this whole season.

Dizzy Fails, Phils Beat Cards, 13-7

7th Place Club Whips St. Louis for First Time This Year.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 17.—Dizzy Dean remarked he didn't feel very well when he took the mound for the St. Louis Cardinals against the Phillies today, and the ace hurler felt worse when the game ended. Philadelphia won, 13 to 7, and Dean didn't last out the contest.

Jimmy Wilson's seventh-place club got to Dean on his first pitch—Herschel Martin singling—and scored three runs the initial inning. The Cards tied it up in their half and Hugh Mulcahy appeared none too sure of staying the route. But he did, while the Phillies got three more runs off Dean and then made seven runs on the offerings of Si Johnson and Jim Winford in the eighth and ninth.

It was the first victory for the Phils over St. Louis this season and ended a Cardinal winning streak at five. Dean now has lost five and won nine games.

A wild throw by Mickey Owen, rookie catcher, allowed Philadelphia to score the first of its five runs in the eighth. After two were out, consecutive singles by George Scharein and Mulcahy, put the former on third. They attempted a double steal. Sharein was trapped between third and home when Owen bluffed a throw, but then the misdirected toss let Scharein get home and Mulcahy reach third.

Chuck Klein, of the Phils, walked his first time up and then got four consecutive hits, including two doubles.

Joe Medwick and Johnny Mize, of the Cards, hit successive homers in the eighth. It was Medwick's twelfth of the season and the second for Mize in the game, his other coming in the first.

By the United Press.

New York.—The United States Golf Association announced sites and playing dates today of 1938's two most important championships—The Open and Amateur.

Cherry Hills Club, at Englewood, Colo., near Denver, will be host to the Open and Oakmont, Pa., will entertain the simon-pures.

The Open championship will be played on June 2, 3 and 4, or June 9, 10 and 11, depending upon the date set for the British Open. The amateur competition will be held September 12-17 inclusive. The Oakmont Club, near Pittsburgh, was the scene of the amateur title play in 1919 and 1925.

River Forest, Ill., June 17 (U.P.).—For the second consecutive day rain today caused postponement of matches in the National Clay Court tennis championships at the River Forest Tennis Club.

Southern Amateur Delayed by Storm

Charlotte, N. C., June 17 (AP).—Interrupted by a galelike wind, hail and rainstorm, the thirty-fifth annual Southern Amateur golf tournament was thrown into overtime play today in the midst of the second round as a terrific deluge washed out seven of the eight second-round matches.

Only a sun-tanned Floridian, tall Carl Dann, jr., of Orlando, reached the quarter-finals in the opening day's double "sudden death" elimination rounds in play twice halted by driving downpours.

Dann advanced by a 5-and-4 decision over Charles Dudley, of Greenville, S. C., the Southern interscholastic champion.

Charles Town Feature Race Won by Lady Buc in Rain

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, June 17.—Mrs. J. H. Elliott's Lady Buck, recently placed in charge of Trainer Don Yates, caused a startling upset in winning the Grant purse, the 1 1/16-furlong dash that featured today's program. Coming from behind in the stretch, the Buck mare stuck her head out to defeat Johnny Bane, a 25-to-1 shot, with Nay Nay a neck farther back in a thrilling, driving finish.

Lady Buck did not take part in the principal betting and at pay-off time, a $44.60 mutuel was displayed. Poll Parrot and Agreeable, heavily backed, could not gain money positions.

Jockey F. Polk rode Lady Buck and had her in a contending position from the start. However, it was not until the field rounded the stretch turn that she could be seriously considered. At that stage, Polk put her to a drive and she outgamed her rivals.

The program which opened under a bright sun and closed in a driving rain attracted a crowd of 4,000.

The day brought a pair of suspensions for riders. Willie Obert was set down for cutting across his field too sharply on the second race and Fred Polk was diciplined for rough riding in the stretch in the third race. Both drew five days.

Willie Obert, ancient jockey, scored a front-running victory aboard Pineaway, a paddock tip in the opening event. Backed into favoritism Pineaway paid a $5.20 mutuel but barely lasted in the stretch ahead of a fast closing Mahogany. Bah's Choice was third, beaten a head and a neck. The winner was a first-time starter.

Chorway, a gelding that has operated over the hunt courses, turned in a smashing race to defeat a cheap field of maidens in the second race. The son of Out Of The Way had some trouble shaking off Sea Charmer, but drew out to win by a length and a half. Double On Sea was a fast-closing third in the field of eight. The winner, handled by Vernon Wisner, paid $15.40.

Landsman won his first purse of the meeting under Jockey R. Roots, handling in the third race. The big gelding went to the front at the far turn and drew out approaching the finish. Wise Revue was a hard-ridden second ahead of the tiring Mazyniata. Landsman paid a $13.20 mutuel.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo gave Bungalow, a $5.60 favorite, one of his best rides in taking the fourth race. The veteran rider had his veteran mount within striking distance from the start, came between horses entering the stretch and went on to down Running Water by three parts of a length. Dressmaker took third money.

Jockey J. R. Hill, a Kentucky jockey, was injured in a fall that marked the sixth race, which was run during a storm. The filly, Margaret Jones, went down soon after the start and threw Hill into the rail. He suffered a badly cut ear and a possible broken shoulder. He was taken to the Charles Town Hospital. Hill was a recent arrival from Beulah Park, where he led the riders at the recent meeting.

Reich Church Election Is Set For June 27

Pastor Says Confessional Groups Are Hampered by Suppression.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 17.—The Rev. Martin Niemoeller, militant Protestant pastor, announced from the pulpit tonight he understood Reich authorities had set the Evangelical Church elections for June 27 "now that the whole directorate of the whole confessional church has been suppressed."

Chancellor Hitler ordered the church February 15 to choose its own synod to conduct its activities, after the Reich's evangelical council, set up by Nazi authorities to coordinate Germany's Protestant Church, resigned.

Several large Protestant bodies, however, threatened to boycott them unless Nazi authorities acceded to a number of conditions, among them recognition by the state of the schism between the so-called Nazi German Christians and the Fundamentalists.

Truce on March 23.

Kerrl on March 23 declared a truce, reconstituting Evangelical Church governments as they existed before February 15, with the announced object of suspending "the quarrel over competence of existing church government bodies pending final regulation through a general synod." Meanwhile, no date was set for the elections.

On May 26 is was disclosed the gestapo—secret police—had imprisoned all five members of the executive committee for church government of the confessional synod.)

The Church on Hohenzollern Platz, in the residential suburb of Wildersdorf, where the pastor spoke, was jammed to the doors and he was obliged to repeat his address later.

He read a list of names of more oppositional pastors whom he said were arrested, expelled or forbidden their pulpits.

The Rev. Niemoeller also announced that today the offices of the Prussian Council of Brethren had been sealed up by the authorities.

He declared this action paralyzed the council's labors and the training of theological students was made impossible except in state faculties where more than 10 per cent of the professors are National Socialists (Nazis).

The administration of the church today, he said, rested in the hands of departments which never had been authorized by the church nor had even any ecclesiastical character.

Under such circumstances, the pastor declared, "the elections are the reverse of free. Only the enemies of the church have a free hand."

He concluded his address with a vigorous appeal to Chancellor Hitler whom, he said, had pledged his solemn word the Christian church would not be hampered nor its rights interferred with.

He added, however, "whether this will help any, we do not know."

"We are at the end of our resources," the pastor stated, "but yet we shall continue to fight for our just rights."

Talented Dance Team at Shoreham

Avila and Nile attracted widespread attention with their delightful dance and as a result have been signed for an engagement in Paris. They appear at the Shoreham Terrace all this week.

Youth Adjudged Sane In Hitch-Hike Slayings

Lonoke, Ark., June 17 (AP).—Certified as sane by physicians, Lester Brockelhurst, charged with hitchhiking killings in three States, faced Judge W. J. Waggoner in circuit court again today and heard his trial for murder re-set for Thursday, June 24.

He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to a charge of killing Victor A. Gates, Little Rook landowner, near here last May 5, when the State alleges, he and his sweetheart-traveling companion, Bernice Felton, 18, were given a lift by the Little Rock man. Brockelhurst was to have gone on trial last Monday, but there was an automatic postponement when Judge Waggoner sent him to the State hospital for observation.

Sally Winston Draws Crowds To Lotus Club

Performer Adept at Blues; Summer Already Here at Shoreham.

By Chanticleer

Not that the young lady we want to talk about isn't known, or anything like that, but when her picture came over from the Lotus today we must confess we wanted to write about the young miss. Her picture appears on this page, and her name, as you have noticed, is Sally Winston. She sings, and her specialty is "blues." The word to describe this type singing certainly is over-used, but it still fits the picture. Yes, sir, Sally is a "blues" singer of exceptional ability.

The last time this night-owler visited with Lotus people it was so crowded that we had to sit at a distant point, and although Sally was a bit dimmed (forgot our spectacles), neverthless her voice was not hidden. But that's not all the Lotus features. There's Blanche Ray, who still is kicking at the ozone, and incidentally it's cooled ozone . . . and the team . . . name of Donald and Drema . . . theirs is combination dance routines . . . like mixing a waltz with a fox trot or a swing number with the fox trot . . . note them . . . Sure, there's Al Norton's Galaxy . . . if we get up enough nerve we're going to find out what the Galaxy means . . . they do eccentric, mind you, eccentric numbers. . . . The Emcee, or did you know, is Al Norton. Bill Strickland still can be found in the bandleader's box . . . waving his baton and curly hair. And last, but by no means least . . . is Alice Mack, who does a fast acrobatic.

Guest Columnist.

This column's informer, who snoops around a bit, wants to write. He wants to write this column . . . so we agreed . . . and here's his . . .

As an unmerciful sun slammed down on Fourteenth street last week, we wished, as we literally steamed along that we could transpose our person to some secluded (all right), some far-off tropic isle (still better); some frigidly cold nook deep in the Arctic Circle (brrrrrr), so that for the nonce our sufferings would cease. Never was an Alpine climber, lost in the maze of those lofty peaks, more delighted at the sight of a cavorting St. Bernard hound bringing succor than we were as our roving eyes caught sight of the Mayfair marquee. You have it from us that the place is marvelously cool, the refreshments delightfully refreshing, and the entertainment, ably handled by Messrs (Hi, Boys,) Lissee and Campbell, of top-notch caliber. (That's the beginning of the end of that.)

The Shoreham Terrace announces that there are only three more days 'til summer, according to their calendar. Could we see your issue, please? Ah, wait a minute . . . here's more . . . "But not according to Robert, our maitre d'hotel," the card continues. Well, that's more like it. Robert will tell you that summer entertaining at the Terrace is in full sway, despite the calendar.

Summer Here Long.

On Monday, which, in the official record books of Calendar, Inc., is the beginning of summer, the Terrace will have rounded out three weeks of presummer entertaining. Did anyone know the difference? Nope, says Robert, "we gave them the moon, the romance under the stars, music in the moonlight, and everything that goes with the summer."

The Terrace is featuring a bit of romance from the land of Cherry Blossoms all this week. They are Osaki and Taki, Oriental novelty artists. Also on the show spotlight are Avila and Nile, talented dance team, who have an engagement this summer in Paris.

Don't be surprised if you bump into Theon, popular maitre of the Metronome of Wardman's, and Joe Wubbold, drummer in the band, same place . . . if they are talking about rhododendrons or onions. Joe knows all about the raising of the ungent bulbs and Theo will have his rhodos. As long as Joe leaves his specimens in the garden . . . all right, Jimmie Santmyer still holds sway and swing with his band.

Here's a recipe. It belongs in the home economics department, but it comes from Joe Geier, of the Hi-Hat, so . . . it's called the Frozen Hi-Hat Cocktail. The recipe follows:

Nightingale Opens.

Well, the Nightingale had the gala opening the other night, and if you were not present, don't say we didn't let you know beforehand. The newest addition to Washington's circuit is located just 3 miles out of Alexandria on the Richmond highway. Jack Hawley furnishes the music and a swell show entertains.

Miss Joan English has returned from New York to take up her duties as songstress at the King Cole Room in the Claridge Hotel.

The Madrillon is as gay as ever these nights. What with Johnny Shaw and his orchestra, Helen Forrest, vocalist . . . we know the reason. One of the main reasons, according to the management, is the excellent quality of the food, and that, my little friends, is a big item.

J. H. Melrose, major domo at the Commodore's Cork and Bottle, was found the other day whipping cream. In the course of the conversation that followed the meeting . . . he kept it up . . . net result: There was on hand some additional butter. The Cork and Bottle is a naturally cooled room and now is the time to stop by.

The informer, disguised as a vitiling fireman, spent one whole evening at Brinkley's. The object was to determine the reasons whereby people visiting this spot always lingered. He relates it's the band, with Carl Gunther at the helm. So now you know.

Visit the Boulevard Farms this week for a treat. A floor show that will be long remembered, is in the offing. And that dinner! Now, will you go?

Return of Constitutional Guarantees Regarded as Political Move.

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janiero, June 17.—Full constitutional guarantees were restored to Brazil's 47,000,000 people today after a 19-month "state of war" in a move interpreted by observers as an effort to weaken the campaign arguments of a presidential candidate.

Simultaneously, dispute between two high officers which may weaken the army's influence in politics came into the open with the resignation and military arrest of a corps area commander.

Constitutional rights were suspended in many areas November 5, 1935, after an abortive Communist revolt. The suspension was extended from time to time by Congress, the last extension expiring at midnight.

Observers said restoration of political normalcy by President Getulio Vargas appeared directed at the bid of former Gov. Armando de Salles of Sao Paulo State for the presidency in the elections next January 1.

Salles was said to be building his campaign on two main planks—the liberation of thousands imprisoned for political motives after the Communist revolt and full restoration of the constitution promulgated July 16, 1934.

Differences among army leaders cropped out with the military arrest of Gen. Waldomiro Lima, who resigned as commander of the Brazilian army's first corps area, on charges of making public accusations against a superior officer.

He was detained after admitting responsibility for a letter challenging Gen. Pedro Aurelio Goesmonteiro to prove charges that Lima had conspired against the government.

Swanson Pledges Survey at Norfolk

By the Associated Press.

Representative Norman R. Hamilton, of Portsmouth, Va., said yesterday Secretary Swanson had promised a survey would be made of the Norfolk Navy Yard looking to the possibility of constructing a battleship there.

Hamilton talked with the Secretary after opening of bids from private shipyards on construction of one of the two new proposed vessels.

Hamilton said that as a result of the bids received the Navy would give serious consideration to assigning both construction jobs to Navy yards.

Hamilton said Swanson told him he would launch an immediate survey of the Norfolk yard to see what it would cost to rehabilitate the yard's equipment, including ways necessary to the construction job.

Rebellion Started By Moro Chieftain

Manila, June 17 (AP).—Moro chieftain Amai Millon hoisted the red flag of rebellion in the Mindanao Island jungles and promptly received an ultimatum tonight to surrender or take the consequences.

Millon told his followers he was rebelling because the government was harassing him, but details of his complaint were not given.

Prisoner Matches Freedom Against Bloodhound Pack

New Braunfels, Tex., June 17 (AP). County Prisoner Ignacius Vasques matched his freedom against a pack of the trailin'est bloodhounds in Texas today—for the entertainment and education of the State Sheriffs' Association.

It was a knock manhunt, staged by Sheriff A. W. Saegert, of Guadalupe County, to give the officers a close-up view of bloodhounds at work and, incidentally, to test the skill of the dogs.

All the breaks were with Vasques. He had a native, familiar with the country, to aid him; a two-hour start on the dogs and Sheriff Saegert's word he'll be a free man if the hounds don't catch him. Even if they do, Vasques has only five more days to serve on a 60-day sentence for driving while intoxicated.

New York, June 17 (AP).—Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of Bethlehem Steel, arrived from Germany tonight on the Europa en route to Johnstown, Pa., to study the labor situation.

"It is too bad that the labor question has arisen at this point to interfere with the return of prosperity," he said. "We will right ourselves very soon."

Jobless Compensation In Effect in Missouri

Jefferson City, Mo., June 17 (AP).—Missouri's unemployment compensation law, designed to benefit as many as 600,000 men and women if they are thrown out of work, went into effect late today. Gov. Lloyd C. Stark signed the bill providing benefits ranging from $5 to $15 a week for a 12-week period starting three weeks after persons are thrown out of work. Payments will be made after two years from a State-wide pooled fund.

Colored Man Assaults, Beats Girl in Theater

Bronx Child, 10, Is Near Death; Attacker Confesses After Identification.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 17.—A few hours after a 10-year-old white girl was found brutally beaten and criminally assaulted in a Bronx theater, police announced arrest today of a Brooklyn colored man who they said confessed attacking the girl.

Assistant Chief Inspector John A. Lyons said the prisoner, booked as William Ray, was identified by the frail little girl, near death from a fractured skull.

Assistant District Attorney Nicholas Delagi said the prisoner related meeting the child outside the theater yesterday morning as she gazed at poster advertisements.

"Come inside and I'll give you some pictures," Delagi said Ray recalled telling the girl. In the theater the girl resisted his advances, Delagi said the man added, and he struck her several blows with a brick.

After the child was beaten unconscious, the attorney said the colored man went on, he hid her in a narrow ventilating tunnel. She was found there this morning by A. W. Ostrander, night watchman, attracted by the girl's moans and labored breathing.

John Maglione, father of the little girl, Mary, struggled with detectives to get at the colored man, shouting that he would "get a confession out of him."

Shortly afterward, police said, Ray, who had steadfastly protested his innocence, confessed.

Break With President Is Denied by Garner

Amarillo, Tex., June 17 (AP).—Vice President Garner said here today his vacation trip to Texas was planned six weeks ago and his departure from Washington was not the result of any break with President Roosevelt.

The Vice President and Mrs. Garner will leave early tomorrow for the family home in Uvalde.

"I told the President I wanted to go ahead with my vacation as planned and would be subject to immediate call if needed in Washington," Garner said.

On the Air Today

Many years ago, before the advent of radio, a very select few of college graduates on their commencement day had the opportunity to hear addresses by men who were leaders of enterprise in this country. In the various college halls throughout the country the future "leaders" would anxiously await the culmination of their college career . . . the awarding of diplomas. First, however, they would listen to the principal speaker, who would fire them with words that either gave the young graduates a "pat on the back" or a picture of the "hard" world they were about to tackle.

Now, we have the radio. And three years ago the educational division of the National Broadcasting Co. inaugurated the national commencement addresses. These were intended to provide an inspirational talk to hundreds of thousands of graduates of secondary schools, colleges, universities, as well as the general radio audience. In the first year of the inception of this idea Dr. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale University, was the speaker; and in 1936 Glenn Frank, then president of the University of Wisconsin, made the address.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchison, president of the University of Chicago, is the speaker this year. His talk will be heard tonight, over WMAL, at 7:15 o'clock. The address should be worth hearing. His topic is "A Philosophy of Life."

A broadcast from Geneva, Switzerland, where the International Labor Office Conference is now in session, is in the offing today. Henry I. Harriman, employers' delegate from the United States to the conference, will report the findings of that group. The program is listed for WJSV at 4:15 this afternoon.

The trouble with most parents when it comes to planning homemade vacations for their children, is simply "lack of imagination." So says Dr. Dafoe, who needs little introduction to radio listeners. The parents' failure to create a happy atmosphere or interest their children in summer activities is a serious problem. So, Mama and Papa, if you are near a radio set at 10:45 this morning tune in on WJSV and listen to this renowned man.

Bank Clearings Are Under '36 For Third Week

Shrinkage in New York Is Chief Factor in 4.4% Decline

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 17.—Although bank clearings, aided by midmonth settlements, increased over the preceding week, the total failed to equal the 1936 comparative for the third successive week.

As in the two previous periods, the decline for the country as a whole was due mainly to the shrinkage at New York, outside centers continuing to report fair gains over a year ago.

The clearings aggregate for 22 leading cities for the week ended June 16 was $6,157,510,000, according to Dun & Bradstreet. This compared with $6,439,731,000 for the same week of 1936, or a loss of 4.4 per cent. In the year-to-year comparison for the week preceding there was a drop of 1.8 per cent.

Clearings this week showed a gain of $605,261,000 above the total of the week preceding. Between the two similar weeks of 1936 there was an increase of $788,429,000.

Scrap Steel Drops 50 Cents Per Ton

New York, June 17 (AP).—Dow Jones & Co. said in a Pittsburgh dispatch today that as a reflection of current steel strikes, No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap has drooped about 50 cents a ton to around $18 to $18.50 a ton.

Other grades have been affected in the same proportion and trade circles believe that if steel tie-ups continue there will be a further drop in prices, the dispatch says. Steel scrap is down about $5 a ton from the top of the recovery movement.

Wheat Prices Rally Sharply After Slump

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 17.—Right-about-face action late today ran Chicago wheat prices up 3⅛ cents from earlier low levels, and more than offset downturns following Canadian rains.

Late indications were that the amount of moisture received in Canada would prove of little value as a relief for drought-stricken crops. Furthermore, unwelcome heavy rains in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas—4 inches at once place in Oklahoma—were reported as causing a wet domestic harvest.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were varying from ⅛ off to ⅝ up compared with yesterday's finish, July, 1.10@1.10¼; September, 1.09⅞@1.10; December, 1.11⅝@1.11¾. Provisions closed at 2 cents to 15 cents setback.

Brokers' Loans Rise $1,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities, held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $1,169,000,000.

The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $1,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,084,000,000.

2 Plane Tires Flown To Manila for $600

Akron, Ohio, June 17.—When it was discovered last week that two General streamline airplane tail-wheel tires would have to be obtained in Manila, before the Baby Clipper ship could fly on its regular route from Manila to Hongkong, cables were shot to the General Tire factory here.

Locating the needed tires in Honolulu, they were put on the China Clipper flying west from Hawaii early Tuesday and on Thursday the tires were in Manila.

The tires displaced two air-travelers and the air express charges were about $600.

The Market

Stocks Rally After Early Decline to New Lows; Bond Prices Hold Steady.

New York, June 17.—After sinking further to the lowest prices paid this year, stocks improved a little. Sales volume was the second largest in a month at around 1,350,000 shares. It rose with the declines and also with the rallies most of the time. Government bonds were steady. Cotton was steady but other farm products were mostly easier. September wheat closed half a cent higher at $1.10 a bushel.

Strike news kept the markets interested and provided about the only subject for talk. Judging from the way the price winds blew hot and cold, the feeling toward a settlement of the main strike problems changed frequently. Opening prices for stocks were mostly lower, after which the market edged lower until shortly before noon, when a sudden burst of selling that sent the ticker tape a few minutes behind hand threw prices off rather sharply. A rally quickly began and then trading activity lessened along with a fair recovery in prices.

That pattern was difficult to trace in the day's news in any field. An arbitration board was appointed by the Secretary of Labor to consider the steel disputes, which ordinarily would have had a good effect. What the market had hoped (but perhaps scarcely expected) was a firm stand by the Federal Government as well as by a State Governor or two for enforcement of the ordinary peace laws. On the contrary, the Governor of Ohio said he had exhausted all means of settling the steel strike, although he had not turned his hand toward protecting property and lives.

Abroad the developments were at least no worse. Since obtaining dictatorial powers the French premier has succeeded in chasing short sellers of francs to cover, to some extent, at least, and consequently the discount on franc futures has dropped. Spot francs were a trifle lower and sterling was unchanged. Just what the French government intends to do still is a matter of conjecture, and francs are regarded as enjoying nothing more than a breathing spell.

For a while some sections of the securities markets here were concerned with the supposition that, to force home capital, France might attempt to lay its hands on foreign securities held by its nationals. Liquidation of French holdings in our market would be unwelcome, although such selling scarcely would have much effect in more normal times. As an offset to any such action, which is believed unlikely in the first place, in view of the experience of Italy and Germany, the rush of European capital to this country scarcely could be stopped in the face of drastic measures for its confiscation at home.

British Gold.

This week's statement of the Bank of England is interesting as showing a rise in the gold stock to the highest sum ever recorded. Circulation was at the third highest point in history. The surface explanation of the gold increase is purchased by the Bank of England, and presumably from the stabilization fund, as a cover for the increased note circulation. That is not the whole story, for notes could have been provided by an increase in the fiduciary issue. The fact is that the stabilization fund in recent weeks has been willing to take gold and hold it, via the Bank of England, thus relieving to some extent the uneasiness of markets that this country, as the only gold buyer, might tire of the burden. Bank of England notes are going partly into hoarding for account of French and other Europeans with flighty capital.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau blames the drop in tax collections under estimates on the undistributed profits scheme, on evasion by wealthy recipients of dividends. With irrepressible logic the Secretary says that wealthy persons are big stockholders and consequently the rise in dividend payments last year swelled their taxable income. The Government collected less, so it is plain as anything that the device of "splitting personalities" into corporations and members of families cheated the Government of its tax due. What the Secretary of the Treasury failed to go into was the enormous number of owners of a few shares of stock each in virtually all our corporations. The suspicion won't down that most of the extra dividend disbursements last year went to persons who were below the income tax paying scale. The Treasury seems to be kicking back dirt to cover its mistakes.

Odd Lots.

More headaches for the labor economist, as indicated by a headline in the Financial News of London: "Unemployment 3,113 Down. Employment Also Drops 7,000.2." That reads almost like current discussions of our own budget . . . Auburn and New York Steam were watched for their response to developments. The crack in Auburn yesterday appeared to settle the matter for awhile, and in the early trading this morning the stock was steady at a fraction above 14, around last night's closing price. The Steam issues were slow to rise to the bait of a new exchange offer into Consolidated Edison. The first sale of the 7 per cent preferred took place at 90, a gain of 4 points.

Auburn.

No new proceedings in Auburn could be discovered. The stock was a bit steadier in the early trading, but the 4 per cent bonds sold at 31, a fall of 27 points. What seemed to escape general attention yesterday was the all round weakness in transportation stocks associated with Auburn and Cord. The stock exchange is entitled to one more good headache with Auburn, if experience be any guide in the situation of the stock—earnings, number of shares outstanding, sewed up control, and the like—mean anything. The exchange had an excellent opportunity to avoid trouble a few years ago when an airtight corner was manipulated in the stock, but instead the authorities merely extracted a promise from a principal in the affair to lend a little stock now and then.

Seats.

It required only two or three days of higher stock trading volume to turn the market for stocks exchange memberships. A sale was made yesterday at an unchanged price of $85,000, and today a membership changed hands for $89,000. It was reported a day or two ago that fifteen exchange memberships were on the market, but the offers tend to diminish with a rise in price. Brokers act toward their stock exchange memberships a good deal the same as they do toward the course of market prices. A spell of decline gives them an acute case of bearishness, and vice versa.

Stock Seat $89,000; Advance of $4,000

New York, June 17 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange announced today the sale of a membership at $89,000 an increase of $4,000 from the previous transaction. The highest paid for a seat this year was $134,000 and the lowest, $85,000.

Primm Elected Head of Local Underwriters

District Insurance Association Celebrates Its 27th Anniversary.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

The twenty-seventh anniversary of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association was celebrated last night when officials for the organization's new administrative year were inducted into office. As Paul H. Primm accepted the chief executive's gavel from Laurance H. Riggles, retiring president of the association, at the Willard Hotel, he reminded the assembly that the group was organized just 27 years ago.

Tracing the progress of life underwriting in Washington during that period, Mr. Primm referred to the 324 memberships in the association today as evidence of results accomplished by those who have given life underwriting its high place among the professions. Other officers installed for the coming year were, Winthrop G. Batchelder, first vice president; Vernon W. Holleman, second vice president; Ben H. Lingo, treasurer, and Warren S. Stone, secretary.

Committees.

President Primm announced the following committee chairmen to complete his administrative staff: Laurance H. Riggles, advisory; Paul D. Sleeper, banks and trust company co-operation; David S. Bethune, Better Business Bureau; Lawrence C. Crawford, field practice; J. E. McCombs, greeters; William J. Bryan, industrial insurance; John F. Cremen, legislative; Earle W. Sapp, life insurance week coordinator; John L. McElfresh, life insurance week; H. Lawrence Choate, managers section; Charles W. O'Donnell, membership; LeRoy J. Myers, conservation; J. E. McCombs, National committeeman; Thomas P. Morgan, jr., program; Russell Shelk, publicity; James A. DeForce, bulletins; John E. O'Brien, association news correspondent; Vernon W. Holleman, sales congress; Alma McCrum, women's section.

D. Gordon Hunter, vice president and agency manager of Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Co., was introduced as the guest speaker of the evening by retiring President Riggles. In avery interesting address entitled, "Let's Go," Mr. Hunter revealed objectives to be accomplished by better and more thorough life insurance writing during the next year. Following the meeting, a buffet supper was served in the large ball room of the hotel to the members, their wives and guests.

Fenner & Beane Survey.

Estimated 1937 farm income of $9,500,000,000 coupled with the trend toward mechanization of American agriculture, point to the largest sales and profits for the farm equipment industry since 1929, according to a special survey of the Agricultural Machinery Industry issued by Fenner & Beane, New York Stock Exchange firm with a branch office here. Farm equipment sales this year may reach $566,000,000, up 27 per cent over 1936, and almost equal to sales of $571,000,000 in 1929. Of this, the Fenner & Beane study estimates, that $500,000,000 may represent domestic sales, while $66,000,000 may come from the export market which has been showing considerable improvement this year.

Excess Reserves Drop $180,000,000

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday excess reserves of Reserve System member banks stood at $750,000,000 on June 16, a decline of $180,000,000 for the week.

The decline in the banks' supply of lendable funds was traceable in part to deposit withdrawals to meet June 15 income-tax payments and for purchases of the Treasury's June note issue.

For the third successive week the board reported no change in its holdings of Government securities. These now total $2,526,000,000, or $96,000,000 over the same week last year.

Money in circulation declined $20,000,000 during the week, but, at $6,415,000,000 still was $367,000,000 over the same week last year.

Gold stocks climbed $102,000,000 to $12,220,000,000, or $1,677,000,000 over the same week last year.

Japan's Budget For This Year National Peak

Half of 2.873 Billion Yen to Be Used for Military Purposes.

New York, June 17.—During the past few years the expenditures of the Japanese government have been increased materially and, for the fiscal year 1937-38, will amount to 2,873,000,000 yen, a record in the history of Japan and double the amount spent six years ago, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The substantial increase in the expenditures of the Japanese government has been due to several factors, first and foremost of which has been the sharp rise in military expenditures, which for the fiscal year 1937-37 accounted for about 50 per cent of the total government expenditures. Since the expenditures of the government could not be met through taxation, the government has been forced to borrow, with the result that the public debt of Japan has materially increased. The situation has been further aggravated by the fact that the banks have taken a considerable portion of the bonds, thereby increasing the total volume of deposits.

The inflationary forces set in motion by the huge budgetary deficit and the decline in the international value of the yen have contributed materially to a sharp advance in commodity prices.

Inflation in Sight.

If the government should continue its huge expenditures for military purposes, covered by borrowing, sooner or later the forces of inflation will gather momentum and have an adverse effect on the economic situation of the country. While it stands to reason that the Japanese government will make every effort to prevent inflation, particularly as regards commodity prices, such efforts will merely result in more regimentation of the economic life of the country and more drastic regulation of its economic activity.

Senate Leaders Widely Divided On Relief Shift

Robinson's 25% Compromise Draws Fire of 'Liberals;' Barkley Opposed.

The Senate's Democratic leadership divided sharply yesterday over a compromise proposal to shift 25 per cent of the cost of local relief projects to communities able to share the expense.

The compromise amendment was offered by Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson after Senate ranks split wide open on a 40 per cent relief "matching" proposal of Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

It was the third day's debate on the President's $1,500,000,000 relief bill. The Byrnes 40 per cent plan was receiving a vigorous tongue lashing from "young liberal" Western Democrats, when Robinson came forward with his 25 per cent substitute. The "liberal" fire immediately was turned on the Robinson plan.

Barkley, Robinson Split.

The leadership split widened when Robinson's assistant majority floor leader, Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, announced he would fight the 25 per cent compromise. Byrnes, on the other hand, who originally held out for 40 per cent local contributions, said he would support the Robinson amendment.

Mixed feelings on the plan to require a greater amount of relief responsibility from local communities followed no party lines. Southern Democrats, protesting large urban relief grants, were pressing the issue, and the Senate division was largely a sectional one.

Robinson did not represent his 25 per cent plan as an Administration compromise, and it appeared not to be one. The President has stated his opposition to any percentage or rule of thumb method of dispensing relief among communities, but the Byrnes plan has the 13-to-10 backing of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Lauds Harry Hopkins.

"The time has come, if we are to safeguard the credit of the Treasury, to require those able to do so to contribute a reasonable amount," he said.

Robinson said he thought WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins had done "a wonderful work," but added: "Conditions now are different. We have a condition of general prosperity."

Robinson's amendment simplified procedure under which the President would decide how much a community should receive if it could not bear the cost. Determination of credit and taxpaying ability of communities was not mentioned.

His plan provided "that if the President shall find any project to be necessary in order to provide work relief in the community where the project is to be located, and that the applicant is unable to supply the 25 per cent of the cost as herein required, he may authorize the project upon such contribution or assurance of contribution as he finds that the applicant is able to make."

Outcome in Doubt.

Indications had pointed to the probable defeat of the Byrnes 40 per cent plan, but Robinson's compromise proffer left the outcome uncertain when the vote is taken, probably today.

Senators Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, and Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, led the so-called "young liberal" attack on the local sharing proposal, and later in the day they were joined by Southern Democrats Hugo Black, of Alabama, and Claude Pepper, of Florida.

Bailey had contended the current relief program was in conflict with the 1936 Democratic program.

Like G. O. P. Platform.

Schwellenbach countered that the Byrnes and Robinson proposals complied more nearly with the Republican platform of 1936. He asked if "the 27,000,000 who voted for the President last November realized that in a little more than six months the Senate would be defying him."

Black asserted it would be "unfair to require 40 or any other percentage" and impair the present relief system.

Minton answered demands for a balanced budget with the statement: "For my part, I don't intend to stand here and balance the budget at the expense of hungry people."

WPA Classes Reduce Illiteracy in Virginia

Richmond, Va., June 17 (AP).—William A. Smith, State administrator for the Works Progress Administration, said today that teachers on the WPA education program dealt a decisive blow to illiteracy in the Old Dominion last month when out of a total of 1,838 illiterates in the adult education classes, 106 white and 173 colored pupils were taught to read and write.

The May report of the education program, which is under the direction of J. L. Blair Buck, showed in addition that there were 25,488 pupils enrolled in 1,238 classes, including 839 foremen and forewomen who are taking the foremanship training courses. The more than 25,000 pupils were taught by 591 teachers employed under the program.

Virginian Found Guilty of Slaying Landlady

Narrows, Va., June 17 (AP).—James Fillinger, 37-year-old electrician, today faced a 70-year prison term for the slaying of Mrs. Lula Carter Corvin at her home here May 29.

Fillinger was found guilty of murder in the first degree last night by a Giles County Circuit Court jury after a trial in which Commonwealth's Attorney J. L. Dillow claimed the slaying was premeditated murder and asked the death penalty.

The fatal shooting was alleged to have followed a quarrel over the preparation of a meal when Fillinger, who for many years was a boarder in the Corvin home, returned home late at night.

Throngs View Connery's Body Lying in State

Military Rites Planned Tomorrow; Election for Post to Be Called.

By the Associated Press.

Lynn, Mass., June 17.—Silent thousands today filed past the flag-draped, flower-banked casket of United States Representative William P. Connery—the man they knew as neighbor "Billy," the man President Roosevelt called "the champion of the underprivileged."

War-time comrades stood guard over his body for the seven hours it lay in state in the Lynn armory. On Saturday the same veterans will attend a military mass at St. Mary's Church and march in the cortege to St. Mary's Cemetery.

A former soldier and actor, a United States Representative for nearly 15 years, coauthor of the Wagner-Connery labor relations law and chairman of the House Labor Committee, the 48-year-old Congressman died in a Washington hospital Tuesday night.

To the armory came veterans from the Twenty-sixth (Yankee) Division, in which Connery served in France, the workers for whose rights he fought, and his neighbors in this industrial city.

Final arrangements for the funeral Saturday were being made today by his brother and secretary, Lawrence C. Connery, at the direction of the Congressman's widow.

Soldiers of the 101st Infantry, Connery's old regiment, were to fire a volley over the grave.

Representative Connery's colleagues at the funeral will be a Congressional committee. James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, is expected to attend as the Chief Executive's representative.

Meanwhile, Gov. Charles F. Hurley was expected to call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by Connery's death.

Among those mentioned as possible candidates were former State Representative C. H. Nelson Pratt, Saugus Republican, who was defeated by Connery by 25,000 votes in the last election; the late Congressman's brother, Lawrence; Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn; State Senator James P. Meehan (Democrat), Lawrence, and Mayor Walter A. Griffin, Lawrence Democrat.

Slayer of Woman Hunted in Woods In Danville Area

Danville, Va., June 17 (AP).—Virginia and North Carolina authorities late today combed nearby wooded sections for the alleged colored slayer of Mrs. W. T. Hammett, wife of a Chatham County, N. C., farmer.

Mrs. Hammett died in a Durham, N. C., hospital today of bullet wounds in the neck, abdomen and chest, inflicted last night at her home six miles from Pittsboro, N. C.

State Police Sergeant J. H. Farmer and a number of deputies began searching this vicinity last night after learning an unidentified colored man had wrecked an automobile on Danville's outskirts and fled afoot into the woods.

Officers said blood found in the wrecked machine indicated the driver had been injured.

Contestants whose cases will be heard July 26 are John G. Bradley, Elmer Judd, J. S. Judd, R. R. Beahm and Vivian Beahm.

Keswick Farmer Found Guilty of Manslaughter

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., June 17.—Robert Draper, a young farmer of the Keswick neighborhood, on trial under an indictment of four counts, two of which were involuntary manslaughter, was found guilty by a jury in the Albemarle County Circuit Court late yesterday afternoon and given a five-year term in the State penitentiary.

Draper was charged with reckless driving, operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, and the death of William S. Wood, 51-year-old resident of the Campbell section, and 8-year-old George S. Beck, of near Gordonsville, Orange County, both of whom were killed in an automobile accident near Shadwell, this county, on May 1.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 17.—The stock market turned easier at the close after a firm morning session. Transatlantic shares were in supply and the oil and mining groups closed weak. Other sections of the list were generally quiet and German bonds and gilt-edged securities remained steady. Home rails sold higher on reports of a 5 per cent increase in railroad fares and freight charges.

Paris—Suez Canal shares declined 488 francs in the bourse today and Royal Dutch was 89 francs down. The tone was generally firm otherwise, rentes gaining 65 to 330 centimes and Bank of France issues moving up 78 francs.

Liverpool—After selling about a penny higher in the morning trading, wheat futures reacted and closed 2½@2¾d lower on general liquidation and forecasts of rain in Canada. Cotton futures declined 6 to 13 points under realizing and disappointing overseas advices. Favorable weather in the American cotton belt was also a contributing factor.

Japan Refuses Limitation Plea; Bids Disappoint Swanson.

fined their comment on gun sizes to explaining there is no treaty or "gentlemen's agreement" on limitation in effect at present.

It was said no replies from the naval powers would be made public until all have been received. At the time of the London conference, from which Japan withdrew, it was reported Britain, France, Italy and the United States would agree to the 14-inch limit.

On the new battleships, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Quincy, Mass., made a flat bid of $59,900,000. It submitted also an "adjustment provision" bid of $49,870,000, under which it would be reimbursed in addition to this sum for any rises in costs of labor and materials while the work was in progress.

Newport News Firm Low.

The Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Newport News, Va., refused to submit a fixed bid, but offered to do the work for $46,212,500 under the "adjustment provision" plan.

Each bidder agreed to complete the work in 48 months. Decision on acceptance or rejection of any of the bids is expected early next month.

The Electric Boat Co., Groton, Mass., was the only bidder on building the two submarines. It offered to build one ship for a fixed sum of $4,677,000, or an adjustment price of $4,157,000, the ship to be completed in 29 months. If awarded contracts for both submarines it offered to deliver them 29 and 31 months after getting the contract, at a fixed price of $3,907,000 each or an adjustment price of $3,477,000 each.

Bugaboo, Says Swanson.

Secretary Swanson said he felt the fears of rising costs and possible changes in design in the battleship, reflected in the Newport News company's bid, were mostly "imagination." He pointed out that no such difficulties were anticipated if the ships are built in Navy yards, since the pay of laborers is fixed by law and materials always can be obtained.

The Secretary also commented on gun sizes, saying this country was "loath to begin 16-in gun rivalry" and hoped Japan would agree to the 14-inch size.

The two battleships, to be named the North Carolina and the Washington, will be the fastest afloat, it was said, having a speed of about 26½ knots. Some British ships "approach" that speed, but the average for naval vessels is about 21 knots, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, said.

The newest United States battleship at present is the West Virginia, built at a cost of $29,000,000. The hull and machinery cost $17,000,000.

League for Deaf Wants More Jobs For Its Members

In an attempt to improve employment opportunities for the deaf, the advisory committee of the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing last night opened a campaign to convince employers that league members and other persons similarly handicapped may be capable workers.

Led by George R. Dickson, president of the league, and Paul Pernecky, jr., the group discussed placing classes in lip reading in the public school curricula and the problem of ascertaining the actual number of hard of hearing persons in Government employ.

"Because a person fears for his job," Dickson said, "he is always reluctant to reveal any physical handicap, especially deafness."

Pernecky said:

"Experience has shown that defects in hearing are more often an imagined than a real obstacle in the performance of work, and it is the aim of the chapter to make known in the largest possible way the capabilities, and very often the added desirability, of hard of hearing employes."

Members of the committee who attended were Mrs. Gertrude Hunt, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harriet Montague, chairman of the publicity committee, Dickson and Pernecky.

Mrs. Brand Leaves $5,000 to Church

London, June 17 (AP).—Mrs. Phyllis Langhorne Brand, sister of Lady Nancy Astor, bequeathed $5,000 to the Episcopal Church for mountain mission work.

Her will left that sum in trust to Archdeacon Frederick Neve, of Ivy, in Albemarle County, Va.

Mrs. Brand, who died in January, was the daughter of the late Chiswell D. Dabney of Virginia and wife of Robert Henry Brand, merchant banker here.

Most of her fortune of approximately $670,000 was left in trust to her husband for life, and in event of his death, to their children.

She married Br. Brand, the son of the Second Viscount Hampden, in 1917.

Treasury Head Asks Changes to Plug Tax Leaks

Harris & Ewing

and the first witness today, Elmer L. Irey, intelligence division chief of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, will reveal the names of at least several of the tax-dodgers.

Secretary Morgenthau, in answer to a direct question put by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said he hoped the Congress would legislate to plug tax-law loopholes at this session.

The efforts of the only two witnessess were directed toward a reoutline of the examples cited by the Secretary previously in his letter to the President, which Mr. Roosevelt incorporated in his message to the Congress on June 1.

The tax avoidance types which the Treasury believes must now be met, Magill said, include foreign personal holding companies—six variations; foreign insurance companies; domestic personal holding companies to create surpluses and artificial deductions—five variations; husband-wife or father-children partnerships; incorporation of yachts and country estates; the creation of multiple trusts for relatives and dependents—two variations; husband-and pension trusts.

Three Types of Inequalities.

The legal inequalities which deplete revenues consist of three types, in the main, Magill said: percentage depletion; division of income between husband and wife in the eight States with community property laws, and non-resident aliens.

Names of examples of each type of evasion and of the beneficiaries of legal inequalities will be presented, it was said. After yesterday's session, however, many observers held that the revelations will be made in blocks of a few at a time in order to prolong the expected sensation of the disclosures as long as possible.

Magill, in the course of his statement, remarked on the difficulty the Treasury's agents have had in securing information in foreign countries—the Bahamas and Canada—on tax-dodging activities of American citizens. State Department channels have been required in many instances to check wealthy Americans who have used certain smaller foreign countries, such as Liechtenstein, Newfoundland, the Bahamas and other such places as bases for corporations which serve only as "dummies" for tax-evading purposes, Magill indicated.

Asks "Practical" Laws.

Morgenthau, slapping at the "sporting theory of tax administration," asserted, "Some reform is imperative * * * The immediate objective in the present emergency is practical tax legislation."

In expanding his previous letter to the President, Morgenthau called attention once more to the man who incorporated his yacht and the one who incorporated his racing stables as examples of the use of the corporate device to create false losses and then deduct them from taxes. He said:

"These transactions partake of the same unreal character as if a small taxpayer incorporated his household kitchen as a restaurant and deducted the expenses and losses from his taxable income because he had so few customers. * * * No small taxpayer would think of calling himself a golf instructor and then charge the expense of his golf game against his income because he got no pupils."

In discussing his own estimates of income tax receipts in the past few years, Morgenthau showed that his 1935 fiscal year estimate was 4.6 per cent less than the actual receipts; that in 1936 receipts were but 1.6 per cent below his estimate, but that for the present year the estimate was about 10.4 per cent too high.

This latter variance caused him to institute an investigation, he said, with the result that it was found "collections in certain areas where there is a considerable concentration of wealth and income has not increased by as large a percentage as had the total income tax receipts for the country as a whole."

Field investigations confirmed this, the Secretary said, and caused the present inquiry.

Morgenthau, quoting the accusation that the present investigation is an attack on wealth, answered the charge by saying, "Actually anyone who gives the matter unbiased consideration will realize that it is for the benefit of the rich to plug loopholes in tax laws, since this raises more revenues without raising rates."

Magill, pointing out in particular detail that several "shacks" in the Bahamas are "plastered" with "long lists of impressive-sounding corporations, financed by American capital," stressed that Bahamas inhabitants are poverty-stricken, with a small liquor trade and a few winter tourist hotels as the only source of income for the natives.

McCarran Pledges Fight On Supreme Court Plan

Reno, Nev., June 17 (AP).—United States Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, opponent of President Roosevelt's court reorganization program, told the Reno Lions Club today that he and many other Congressional members will "fight this great mistake just as long as we have breath in our bodies."

"Sometimes Presidents make mistakes—then it is necessary for those on the sidelines to preserve the balance," said McCarran, member of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

French Air Fleet Stronger.

Bordeaux, France, June 17 (AP).—Pierre Cot, French air minister, dedicating the new Herignac Airport, said today France's air force would number 1,680 planes by the end of the year. He said France now has one of the most powerful air fleets in the world, with 1,260 ships, second in rank in Europe to only that of Soviet Russia.

Text of Roosevelt Letter

Text of President Roosevelt's letter to Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee opposing a reduction in rates of interest on Farm Credit Administration loans.

I am disturbed by the provisions of H. R. 6763 and think I should advise you of the situation which the passage of this bill would create. The whole question involves the rate of interest charged by Government agencies and relates not only to farm loans but also to monies lent by the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Public Works Administration, and other agencies.

We ought, first of all, to examine into the original object of the Congress and the Administration in 1933. It was:

(1) To stop wholesale foreclosures and failures by refinancing the debts of farmers, home owners, counties, cities, towns, small businesses and banks on a basis that would permit them to pay out as national prosperity returned;

(2) To provide for extensions of principal and interest payments which farmers, home owners, etc., were uable to meet because of causes beyond their control.

In the case of farmers, they were the only classification of the many listed above who were given temporary reductions in interest rates to assist in their financial rehabilitation. This was done because of their then existing mortgages due to the Federal Land Banks, which had been made necessary by previous conditions.

In regard to farm borrowers, there was another definite objective—to avoid the old custom of 6 or 7 or 8 per cent charged on first mortgages, and 8, 10, 12 and even 15 per cent charged for second mortgages.

At the time the original legislation for farmers, home owners, business men, banks, municipalities, etc., was passed, no one thought, and no reasonable person should think today, that the Government of the United States should permanently subsidize these borrowers by an annual grant or gift caused by legalizing an abnormally low rate of interest.

It is not reasonable to insist that 4 per cent on first mortgage for a farmer or 5 per cent on a second mortgage is an unreasonably high rate of interest.

Everybody knows that the Government, as well as the Federal land banks, has to borrow money before it lends it and must, therefore, get that rate back. On long-term borrowings the Government would have to pay a rate of interest of about 3 per cent. The Federal land banks or the Government must stand the cost of servicing loans and collecting the interest which, on the average, amounts to a little less than 1 per cent. In addition to this, there are losses which will amount to at least one-half of 1 per cent to 1 per cent additional. The net result is that, at present, the Federal land banks must get a 4 per cent return on first mortgages and the Government a 5 per cent return on second mortgages (where, of course, the losses are heavier), in order nearly to break even.

In the case of H. R. 6763, the additional cost to the Government of the United States would be more than $40,000,000 a year. It seems to me that the Congress should be definitely advised of this fact before taking action on this bill.

The passage of this bill was clearly not contemplated in the preparation of the budget for the fiscal year 1938. As you know, I am definitely seeking the balancing of that budget. The problem is a comparatively simple one from the budgetary standpoint; if the budget is thrown out of balance through extra appropriations or obligations, new taxes alone will bring the budget into balance.

Widow Pleads Guilty In Slaying of Child

Riverhead, N. Y., June 17 (AP).—Mrs. Helen Tiernan, 28, brought her trial for the slaying of her 7-year-old daughter to an abrupt end tonight by pleading guilty to a charge of second degree murder soon after the State rested its case.

The surprise plea by the blonde New York widow who allegedly plotted the deaths of her two children to make room for a lover in the three-room flat, came as a special night session began in Suffolk County Court. She faces a sentence of 20 years to life imprisonment.
